FORMER LEGAL CHIEF OF VETERANS' BUREAU TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

Charles F. Craemer, Who Recently Resigned, Shoots Himself; Probe Into Records Under Way.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—A few hours after he had bid his wife goodbye as she stepped on the midnight train for New York, Charles F. Craemer, former general counsel of the United States veterans' bureau, returned to his home and shot himself to death early today.

Craemer, a former resident of San Francisco, resigned from the legal department of the veterans' bureau, effective March 8, last, as a direct result of an avalanche of criticism directed against him by many veterans' organizations, notably the Disabled American Veterans.

While both the department of justice and District Attorney Gordon deny Craemer was facing an indictment as a result of charges of graft and irregularities in the veterans' bureau, his records, it is understood, will undergo close scrutiny during the investigation now under way.

In Harding's Former Home

The suicide took place at the former home of President Harding, purchased by Craemer when he first came to Washington. A maid found his body, clad in night clothes, in the bathroom, a .45-calibre revolver lying close by.

Craemer was appointed general counsel of the veterans' bureau June 20, 1921, resigning just prior to the retirement of Colonel Charles R. Forbes as director of bureau.

Craemer was a member of many clubs in San Francisco, New York and Washington.

ARREST NEAR FOR ETHER BURGLARS

Trace Two More Robberies to Thieves Operating in Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., March 14.—Clews, unearthed by the local police today led them to believe they would soon apprehend the skilled burglars who chloroformed and robbed Miss Carolina Hazard, former president of Wellesley college.

Rare stones, heirlooms, rings, brooches and other jewelry were taken from Miss Hazard's home near here as she slept.

Two additional robberies were discovered today when W. H. Kelly, retired Pittsburg capitalist, and Fred L. Jackson, former Chicago lawyer and now Pacific coast manager for the California Almond Growers' association, reported to the police their homes had been ransacked of jewelry valued at several thousands of dollars.

Ask for Increase in Criminal Work Funds

SACRAMENTO, March 14. — A delegation representing the law and legislative committee of the California police officers' association, headed by Chief of Police Dan O'Brien of San Francisco, called upon Governor Richardson and the state board of control today and asked increased appropriations for the state bureau of criminal identification.

The delegation asked that the recommended appropriation for the bureau of $34,400 be increased to $48,000. Unless additional money is set aside for the bureau it will be seriously crippled and prevented from carrying on necessary functions, the committee set forth.

The board of control indicated that the appropriation for the criminal identification bureau may be slightly increased but refused to meet the demands of the committee.

The delegation from the peace officers' association follows:

Chief of Police James Drew of Oakland, Chief of Police August Vollmer of Berkeley, Sheriff Frank Barnet, Alameda county; Chief of Police Bernard McShane, Sacramento; Sheriff R. R. Veale, Contra Costa county, and Chief of Police Dan O'Brien of San Francisco.

Predict Long Stay of Allied Troops in Ruhr

PARIS, March 14. — While France and Belgium have announced the conditions on which they will evacuate the Ruhr and Rhineland, both countries are continuing preparations for a long stay in the occupied zones. Both will send reinforcements and replacements into the Ruhr.

Premier Poincare has returned to Paris from Brussels after the most important conference since occupation began. It is expected the cabinet will quickly approve the decisions reached at Brussels.

While France and Belgium agreed to leave the Ruhr and Rhineland automatically and proportionately as Germany pays indemnity, it must of necessity be a long time before all the troops could depart, as Germany must pay $1,537,000,000 on priority claims before the soldiers retire.

Inquiry Into Veterans' Bureau to Continue

ATLANTA, Ga., March 14.—The investigation of the United States veterans' bureau on charges of gross inefficiency in caring for former service men should start with President Harding and go right on down, Alvin M. Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, declared here today.

The legion, Owsley said, stands squarely behind the probe of the bureau by a special senate committee. The bureau "never has met the needs of men who were engaged in the war," he declared.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 14. — Fifteen-year-old Ralph Baker, under sentence of death at Rome, Ga., for the murder of a deputy sheriff, will not hang, but his 19-year-old brother, George, who fired the fatal shot, will be executed unless Governor Hardwick personally intervenes.

The Georgia prison commission today recommended to the governor that Ralph's sentence be commuted, but failed to act on the case of George, which means that there is only one chance for the latter—a direct appeal to the governor.

GLENDALE'S ONLY REAL NEWSPAPER!

EVERYBODY is boosting for The Glendale Evening News—Glendale's only distinct daily newspaper!

The verdict among business men: Glendale is able to support a daily newspaper that is not tied up commercially, financially and politically with a Los Angeles paper. Glendale is a real city now, and can support an independent daily paper without paying tribute to a "big city" paper.

Nothing like The Evening News in the San Fernando Valley! So say good judges of newspapers. We are too modest to pass our opinion.

On and after today the circulation is 6700 copies daily. The slogan is: An Evening News in every home in Glendale and vicinity!

HUGE FOREST FIRE SWEEPS THROUGH MT. LOWE SECTION

The Pacific Electric railway has rushed 1000 men to Mount Lowe to battle the blaze and save the incline railway which leads to the well-known resort and Echo mountain observatory.

Complete Story Of Tuesday Afternoon Club Appears In This Section, Pages 6, 7, 8

FORMAL dedication of the new home of the Tuesday Afternoon Club took place last night, and on pages six, seven and eight of this section of today's Glendale Evening News—made up of two sections with a total of eighteen pages—will be found the complete story, also stories of club history, descriptions of the building, its furnishings, a list of the members, a picture of the building, pictures of the officers, and, in brief, a thorough presentation of the big event in the life of the club and the city generally.

Miss Katherine Virginia Sinks, social and club editor of The Glendale Evening News, compiled the information so completely given on the three pages, aided by officers of the organization.

An illustration of the growth of Glendale in a comparatively few years from a village to the fastest growing city in the United States is seen in the development of the Tuesday Afternoon Club from a small social circle to an organized body of over 790 women who saw the fulfillment of their hopes of many years in the dedication of their beautiful new club home last night.

Formally organized in 1904 with twenty-four members, the Tuesday Afternoon Club has been a vital part of Glendale ever since. From one of the pioneer women's clubs of the state it is now an organization with much prestige in the State and National Federations of Women's Clubs.

The Tuesday Afternoon Club has always been closely associated with Glendale and her growth—a factor in the development of the city, bringing to us many of the great artists in the world of music, literature, and the drama, and carrying the name of Glendale throughout the state by reason of the high standing of the club.

This club has developed the section idea to its highest efficiency and so made the organization of special value to the members. Among the many sections each woman may find some one in which she may work with interest and profit to herself and her fellow members. And there are in the membership of this club many women who have won state-wide prominence in politics, federation work or in other organizations.

The valuation of the new clubhouse adds to Glendale's wealth. We are proud of the beautiful building whether or not we are members of the club and have had any part in its creation. But our greatest asset is this body of Glendale's splendid women working together tirelessly and faithfully to keep themselves and the city on a high cultural plane and favoring those things that are best for the community.

Turn to pages six, seven and eight of this section and read of the marvelous development of this club.

Wed This Morning

A very pretty wedding was solemnized today, Wednesday, March 14, 1923, when Miss Thelma Rupp and Clifford Cox were united in marriage at 11 o'clock in the Glendale Presbyterian church, Rev. W. E. Edmonds officiating. Only immediate members of both families and a few intimate friends were present.

The church was a bower of peach blossoms and spring flowers. Ferns, palms and greenery were artistically used in the decorations, forming a beautiful background for the bridal party.

Oscar F. Walton of Los Angeles played the wedding march by Mendelssohn, and Mrs. Jerome Hirsch, also of Los Angeles, sang "Chanson De Slorian" (a Slorian's song) by Benjamin Godard.

The bride wore a white crepe satin gown, embroidered in crystal beads with a flowing silken veil fastened in place with a bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. The wedding veil was one worn by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Suzanne Rupp, when she was married in Brussels, Belgium.

The bridesmaid, Miss Myrtle Morris, wore a white canton crepe gown, with a wide girdle of coral and gold taffeta ribbon. She carried a bouquet of jonquils and fern. Miss Morris is a chum of Mrs. Cox, who came down from Washington especially to be present at the wedding. The best man, Truemaan Johnson of Pasadena, is a very close friend of the groom.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Cox greeted their friends at a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Rupp. Besides the bride's parents, Mrs. H. F. Strong, Mrs. William Litchfield, Mrs. Frank Thomas of Los Angeles, and Miss Frieda Pihlgren, also of Los Angeles, assisted in receiving. During the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Cox slipped away for "parts unknown," where they will spend a two weeks' honeymoon.

Mrs. Cox is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Rupp of 712 Orange Grove avenue and has been a resident of Glendale for many years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cox are graduates of the University of Washington, and it was while at the university their romance began. Mr. Cox is the son of Mrs. Rachel Cox of Pasadena and is a prominent business man of the Crown city, being connected with the First National bank there.

DON'T GET IN HER WAY

Who in the world was it who said (I quote from memory and very much under correction?) "Woman is like a shadow, pursue her and she flees, elude her and she pursues."

Mr. Bartlett, for a wonder fails to enlighten me on that subject. It ought to have been Byron, but it wasn't, or if it was, Mr. Bartlett did not think it worth repeating.

It's a very good saying, but when you come right down to it, doesn't it apply just as much to man as to woman?

And doesn't it—and at last by devious ways I reach the thing I realy started to talk about—apply better than anything else in the world to that tantalizing enchanting condition known as sleep.

Pursue her all night long and she eludes.

Try to wake up in the morning and shake yourself free of sleep, and off you go into a drowse again.

Naturally!

A woman said to me the other day: "I simply couldn't get to sleep last night. I heard the clock strike 11 and 12 and I said: 'I must get to sleep before I hear it strike again, but I didn't.'"

Of course she didn't. "Pursue her and she eludes."

I have become more and more convinced of that fact since I have been training myself to take a brief nap after lunch at noon.

At first I tried very hard and didn't get to sleep.

Then finally I said to myself: "Well, I will get rested, anyway. It doesn't really matter whether I sleep or not." And, behold, I went to sleep.

And Then I Woke Up

Now I always do that when I find myself trying to get to sleep. And almost invariably after I have relaxed my efforts I find my thoughts getting that fuzzy way they do just before you drift off. And presently I wake up.

Too much effort is fatal to many objects but to none more than to the winning of sleep.

To get to sleep you must relax and you can't relax when you are trying to do anything.

The doctors say a person troubled with insomnia can get along perfectly well with only about four hours' sleep a night if he will rest the rest of the time. So don't worry while you lie awake. Just try to relax, be thankful you are lying comfortably in your bed and aren't a doctor or an electrician or a fireman likely to be called in the middle of the night to go out into the cold dark world.

Trust Nature

If you have a great deal of trouble with insomnia have something warm at stomach and feet, and something cool on your head to keep the blood from going to your head and making your mind more active. Drink some warm milk if you can get it. Train yourself to keep your mind off troubling subjects, and leave the rest to nature. She will look out for you. It's her job to keep you alive and she can do it if you don't get in her way.

GOITER—NO II

Did you know that fish and other animals sometimes have goiters? You know what goiters are. I shall tell you anyway. When the thyroid enlarges it is known as goiter. The thyroid is a ductless gland in front of the neck.

At the state fish hatcheries in Pennsylvania so many of the fish developed goiter that it was thought the industry would have to be abandoned. But, instead of abandoning it, two doctors, Drs. Marine and Lenhart, did a little experimenting with the fish in view of curing them. They did cure them.

They found that by adding a small amount of iodin to the food or water the goiters disappeared. And from this practical application of the use of iodin in the prevention of goiter in fish has come the most astounding results in the prevention of goiters in the human family.

Now how does iodin prevent and cure simple goiters? In this way: It has been found that the active principle of the thyroid gland is a compound of iodin. When there isn't the normal amount of iodin in the gland, Nature tries to remedy the condition by enlarging the gland.

It was found by experimenting on dogs that if five-sixths of a dog's thyroid was removed and the remaining one-sixth was supplied with sufficient iodin there was no tendency towards enlargement. These investigators who were working on dogs also found that when the iodin content of the thyroid gland in pregnant animals was deficient, their young were born with goiters. They also found that this tendency towards goiter formation in the young could be prevented by maintaining a normal iodin content in the mother's thyroid.

Their conclusions were: (1) Iodin is necessary for normal thyroid function. (2) The iodin content varies inversely with the degree of enlargement; that is, the larger the thyroid, the less is the iodin content. (3) The iodin present in individual thyroids is variable, but there is a certain minimum which is necessary for its normal structure.

It was upon these conclusions that Drs. Marine and Lenhart, in collaboration with the Pennsylvania State Fish and Game Commission, based their conclusions that supplying iodin to the goiterous fish would cause the goiters to disappear.

I got this data from an article, The Prevention of Simple Goiter, written by Dr. C. P. Kimball, director of the Cleveland Clinic, Cleveland, Ohio, for the American Journal of Public Health.

Under the direction of Drs. Kimball and Marine, the knowledge which had been gained by these experiments on fish and dogs was applied to the girls of the public schools of Akron, Ohio. Fifty-six per cent of these girls had enlarged thyroids (goiters). The work was begun in 1916 and continued through 1920.

For two weeks each spring and fall about 5000 girls during the three years took a very small amount of sodium iodid in drinking water once a day. Of those taking this preventive dose of iodin, not a single normal girl developed goiter, and in 60 per cent of the girls who had goiter at the beginning the goiters disappeared. Among the girls not taking the iodin as a preventive, approximately 28 per cent developed goiter and many of these goiters became quite large.

From this experience it is now known that if a girl's thyroid is supplied with sufficient iodin during the years of adolescence a goiter will not develop. Goiter is six times more frequent in girls than boys. The same treatment would apply to boys. Dr. Kimball says that a small fraction of a grain of iodin at weekly intervals is sufficient to assure the full normal iodin content of the gland, and they are now using chocolate tablets, each containing ten milligrams of iodin in the form of an organic iodid. Each girl takes one tablet a week throughout the year. This method of goiter prevention, he says, is absolutely safe and it is entirely practicable.

Next week I'll tell you about diet in relation to goiters.

THE EGG SHAMPOO

Even when the scalp is in perfectly healthy condition and the hair thick and abundant I advise using an egg whenever the hair is shampooed at home. It makes the shampoo so much easier that it is quite worth the trifling expense, while its benefits to even a healthy scalp are very great.

The trouble with most home shampoos, and for that matter with many given in beauty shops, is that the hair is not soaped enough in the first place, nor given sufficient rinsing afterwards. The oil that coats scalp and hair, and that binds in with itself an enormous amount of dirt needs a lot of soap and fresh hot water for its removal. The beaten egg as it dries upon the scalp takes up all this and all the loose dandruff that lies over the scalp, holding it firm as it dries. The egg, of course, should be well beaten, though it need not be frothy before it is used and it should be allowed to dry for at least half an hour.

The More Egg the Less Need of Rinsing.

The very first application of soap and fairly hot water will take out practically all the egg along with the oil, dirt and dandruff, which it has absorbed. A second soaping, preferably with fresh hot water, is really all that is necessary. The hair and scalp are now clean, only the soap is still to be removed. Fewer rinsings are necessary due to the use of the egg. The first should be with quite hot water, a little hotter than that used with the soap. The next rinsing should be with water almost equally hot, the third cooler, the fourth still cooler, and at the end a quick rinse with quite cold water to close the pores, and prevent cold in the head.

If you are fortunate enough to have a hose attachment to the bathroom faucets, the sort that fixes over both hot and cold water and mixes them into one tube, the rinsing can be accomplished very quickly, since the force of continual hot water driven through the hair will remove the soap in no time.

Ruth M--Operations for correcting small defects of the nose are not considered serious, but since the nose is such a characteristic feature there would be little to gain by changing its shape. The chances of losing much of the natural expression through changing the shape of the nose should be considered, and unless it is very badly formed it should not be changed.

Blue Eyes.—At 17 years of age, 5 feet 1 inch, you are 15 pounds overweight at 125 pounds. Milk is not fattening if the cream is removed; buttermilk is not fattening either.

Elizabeth A.—There is not space to publish hair tonic at this time, but I will be glad to mail the formula on receipt of a s. a. e.

Court Frees Avenger Of Ruined Home Life

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—The unwritten law received legal cognizance again when the district attorney's office refused to prosecute Scott Wilmot, Canadian World War veteran, who, several months ago shot and wounded Paul Peters, self-confessed wrecker of his home.

The charge of assault to commit murder against Wilmot was dismissed by Superior Judge Reeve after Assistant District Attorney Charles Fricke informed the court there was insufficient evidence on which to prosecute Wilmot.

Wilmot and his wife, Yvonne Wilmot, were married in Belgium while Wilmot was overseas as a Canadian soldier, and later came here to live.

The court issued an order restraining Carpenter from writing any more letters regarding Miss Glynne and ordering him to pay the cost of the suit.

I do not often include chicken in my daily menus because I know that so few people can afford to buy chicken—and I want my menus to be of practical use to those among us who can expend only a small amount of money on meat and grocery bills, as well as to those who are not so limited.

But every housewife should know how to cook chicken deliciously, whether she can afford to serve it often or not. At least for a guest meal most of us can manage to have it. So today's chat is for the young housewife who has not had much experience with chicken cookery:

Chicken en Casserole: (The advantage of cooking in a casserole is that tougher cuts of meat, or tougher birds, can be made more tender than would be the case if cooked in an open pan; for, the juices and steam are kept in, under a casserole cover, thus making the food more savory.) Have your butcher clean a fowl for you. When you get it home, cut it into neat joints, removing the skin and as many small bones as possible. Put into a frying pan three tablespoons of olive oil and heat; cook the chicken-pieces in this, a few at a time, till they are fried enough to look white on both sides. Turn them frequently, but do not brown. Drain on crumbled paper. (It may be necessary to add more oil to the pan before all the pieces are fried.) Now make the following sauce in a small saucepan: Rub two tablespoons of flour into three tablespoons of melted butter; stir into this one and one-half pints of canned chicken soup—diluted, if necessary, to make this amount of liquid. Let the sauce boil for five minutes, then pour it over the fried chicken-pieces, which you have arranged in a casserole. Place a sheet of buttered brown paper over all and put on the cover of the dish. Bake in a moderate oven for two hours.

Fricasseed Chicken or Fowl: Proceed as directed in above recipe with regard to cutting the uncooked chicken into pieces. But, instead of frying the pieces in olive oil, fry them in beef drippings till slightly brown. When all are brown, add enough boiling water to cover. Season with one tablespoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of pepper and a bunch of herbs. Let simmer till tender (a chicken will be tender in one and one-half hours, but a fowl may require three hours of simmering.) Thicken the pan liquor with flour and butter, and serve the chicken on toast with this gravy poured over.

Note: Some butchers will cut up a chicken for fricasseeing, thus saving the housewife this trouble.

MEXICO TO URGE WAR ON BANDITS

High Import Duties Planned To Halt Importations Of Munitions

WASHINGTON, March 14. — President Obregon of Mexico has decided to adopt stringent regulations to curb bandit activities below the Rio Grande, according to official advices reaching here this afternoon.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover was informed by the American commercial representative at Mexico City that a high import duty, designed to be prohibitive, had been placed on all firearms and ammunition. New efforts will also be made to stop smuggling from the United States.

RHOADES LEAVES GLENDALE C. OF C.

Resignation Takes Effect on April 1; He Will Engage in Business Here

James M. Rhoades, secretary of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to the board of directors, to take effect April 1.

Mr. Rhoades was appointed to the position of secretary of the organization two and a half years ago, immediately following the reorganization of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce and the election of the first board of directors, and during the time he has held the position he has devoted himself to the betterment of conditions here and to the efficient carrying out of the various projects taken up by the organization.

The Glendale Chamber of Commerce in the brief period of its reorganization has grown until there are now 900 members in good standing on its rolls, and this growth is attributed largely to the efforts put forth by Mr. Rhoades and his aids to build up the organization to the highest pitch of efficiency and to include in its membership the representatives of every line of business and of every profession in the city.

Free of Debt

The Chamber of Commerce, it is pointed out, is free of debt today and is rated as one of the most progressive organizations of its kind in the country, having contributed, in no small measure, to the sensational growth that marked the city during the past two years.

In a statement this morning Mr. Rhoades expressed his appreciation of the treatment given him by the boards of directors with whom he has worked since the formation of the Chamber of Commerce, and he praised highly the loyalty and co-operation that has been given him by the assistant secretary, E. F. Sanders, and by the staff of the organization in everything that was done during his term of office.

It is Mr. Rhoades' present intention to engage in business here on his own account, in the city in which he has the greatest faith and with whose future he desires to be associated, making his home here and helping to build up Glendale.

PLAN MUNICIPAL AUTO CAMP SITE

Properly Policed Camp Will Pay Revenue to City, Supporters Claim

The possibility of the establishment of a municipal auto camp was discussed at the weekly meeting of the board of directors of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce at the Harriet Mae Tea Shop at the corner of Maryland and Harvard yesterday, when George Karr, chairman of the civics committee, brought the matter up in connection with his report regarding the proposed spring clean-up. The auto camp on the San Fernando road, Mr. Carr stated, had been inspected by the civics committee, the chief of police, and the city health officer, and the result of their investigations was such that an ordinance to establish a municipal camp is now under consideration.

L. B. Wilson, who followed Mr. Karr, declared that the situation of the camp ground is a menace to Glendale, and he added that many of those who stop there are petty thieves and grafters who are totally free from police supervision, as would be the case if they camped in a muncipal camp ground. The camp ground, he added, could be policed and made to pay a revenue to the city, and he suggested various sites where it would be perfectly feasible to establish a municipal camp that would be a distinct asset to the city and where campers could be protected.

Delay Clean-Up

The spring clean-up, Mr. Karr reported, is still undecided, as the city council has notified his committee, through City Manager W. H. Reeves, that there is neither the money nor the trucks available at present to permit the city to carry out the work. The decision of the council, it was stated, is not final, and further steps will be taken to enlist the official co-operation in the task of cleaning up the city before the date set for the opening of the Merchants Industrial Exposition.

Roy L. Kent, chairman of the postoffice committee, presented the facts concerning the proposed reduction in the staff of the Glendale postoffice and asked that the Chamber of Commerce take the matter up with the postoffice department in Washington and also through the California delegation in congress, in order to secure the additional help that is needed here and also to prevent the slash in the local force.

A letter was read from Assemblyman Frank C. Weller urging that as many as possible from Glendale attend the hearing on reapportionment that is to be held at Sacramento tomorrow, March 15, to lend their influence to the movement to give the southern part of the state its proper number of representatives in the state legislature. Weller's letter also set forth the stand he is taking on several bills of interest to Glendale that are now pending in the assembly.

Signs for Streets

Secretary James M. Rhoades read a letter from a firm manufacturing metal street signs, in which a price of $22 each was quoted, but C. E. Kimlin stated that the city council has received quotations from another source of $7 per sign, and he added that it is probable that the city council will install these street signs gradually throughout the town as the funds in the treasury permit.

The meeting adjourned from the restaurant to the Chamber of Commerce rooms in the Citizens' Building to consider a number of other matters of importance, including the finances of the organization, sitting as a committee of the whole.

Humor-Conscious and Not Sacrificed for Pictures About 'Personal Liberty' Learn and Then Unlearn

By Gil A. Cowan

HUMOR, what is it and who has it? That is a question which sometimes puzzles editors, and well it may. If it is fit to print, it must be clean and clear and when you have that it still remains to be seen whether or not the public will laugh.

Cynics usually create more unconscious humor than the proverbial funny man. It is said that a clown, hearing of the death of his mother, went through a circus performance with tears streaming down his chalky face. The public howled in glee.

You may imagine the writer has thoughts about something humorous. It was this: On the Key Route ferry between San Francisco and Oakland a Chinese family was aboard. The baby of the outfit, its squint eyes aglow with new worlds to conquer; its red flannel shirt showing out from the unbuttoned back of a white dress, it wanted to get up on the seat beside an older brother.

After a few yips and several ki yis, it was boosted upon the peach, as it were, and from that vantage point it surveyed the smiling faces of interested passengers. The father joined the group, digging up a nickel chocolate bar and evenly apportioning it among the hungry mouths.

The baby had something, a piece of chocolate. And it told the world about it without saying as much. Then it proceeded to smear chocolate over a satisfied celestial countenance. As an after-piece, it dragged the proverbial gold watch, with its heavy chain, from the parental pocket and proceeded to "da da" as it knowingly looked at the hands go round.

As the ferry docked the baby called out a "goo bye" that gave the crowd a greater "kick," as it were, for while the party was leaving the boat, so was everyone else except the crew. That was real humor, but it takes a better story teller to make you roar with laughter, we'll bet.

At Monterey Sunday another human life, perhaps two, was sacrificed for film production. An aviator crashed to earth in the making of a picture. A week before a "human fly" in New York dropped 10 stories while the cameras ground out the sausage making scene.

The first of the year, it was reported, Will Hays, director general of the motion picture industry, issued an order forbidding human risks. But with such stars as Douglas Fairbanks and a few more holding out against his authority, Mr. Hays is fast sinking into a non-entity. Even the reformers are assailing him and yet it must be conceded his scepter has been used to much good advantage.

It is a fickle public nowadays. All are prone to criticize and few to praise. Also, none of us like to accept arbitrary regulation, even in the best of families. Discipline evidently is not an American quality.

We hear too much of "personal liberty," especially that type which is liscentious. Certain people hold it is their privilege to get drunk, or half-drunk, as the case may be. Very fine, but it ought to be a sober man's duty, as well as privilege, to knock a foul mouth drunkard for a month of Sundays when he disturbs the peace.

Such procedure would be much more efficient than merely making it illegal to manufacture, sell or transport liquor.

Canards, which have found their way into public print from time to time, are going to be a thing of the past if senate bill No. 474 is passed by the legislature and signed by the governor.

This measure makes it a misdemeanor for people to wilfully furnish false information of a libelous nature to publishers or their employes. In plain language, editors will be safeguarded from the scurrilous scandalmonger whose words will be subject to judgment by the courts.

According to International News Service dispatches doctors at the Mt. Sinai hospital in New York have isolated the sleeping sickness germ and prepared a serum, the effectiveness of which has yet to be found out. A German chemical concern already is manufacturing a preventive remedy.

Medical science was disturbed, more or less, by a young Michigan woman registering 114 degrees temperature, until they found she was faking. According to other dispatches old people can become young again by getting a few quarts of new blood in their system, the gland cure for age having failed miserably in several notable instances.

In every day in every way we are learning, as Coue and his cohorts might say, and we no sooner learn our lessons than the texts are changed and we have to absorb a whole flock of new ideas.

A current comment says that the Chinese race has forgotten more than the present civilization has begun to know. Skeptical perhaps, but true. A philosopher once said, "the more you learn, the less you know."

And to put a little reverse English on his deduction, "the more you know about any given thing, the less you are apt to learn about others."

It is the way of the mind.

ALL GLENDALE CONGRATULATES WOMEN OF TUESD

Building Specially Designed To Care For Needs, Blendin

HEARTY WELCOME WITH DEDICATION CEREMONY

Bits of Club History, Announcements and Entertaining Program Make Up First Formal Gathering In Quarters

"WELCOME HOME!" That was the simple but meaningful greeting given last night by Mrs. Daniel Campbell to members of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, who met for their first regular meeting in the new clubhouse, entertaining as their guests their husbands and escorts with the annual "Husbands' Night" program. The beautiful new auditorium was crowded to capacity, with all of the 764 seats filled and every bit of standing room occupied by the crowd of more than 1000 persons.

It was a gala event for the club women, a joyous climax of years of anticipation and members and guests shared in the fraternal happiness of the occasion.

An hour before the time announced for the meeting the doors of the new club home were opened and those who had not visited the building were taken through the various rooms and shown the treasures of the new home by those who had taken part in the housewarming the previous day.

Many additions were noted to the many furnishing and floral gifts that had occupied places in the club rooms on Monday. Several of the gifts had not arrived for the Monday event and in looking about the building last night the club members were happily surprised to find new possessions.

Artistic Lighting

Preceding the opening of the meeting the large company gathered in the auditorium, where they had splendid opportunity to study in detail the pleasing, artistic effect of the feature room of the building. A real treat was the demonstration of the stage and auditorium lighting effects. A system of shaded, colored lights is installed in the stage footlights and in the lighting troughs on the side walls of the auditorium and club members and friends last night witnessed the artistic use of these vari-colored lights to effectively blend with the beauty of the room.

Another feature noted in the auditorium is the iron standards of the seats on the aisles. These standards are painted in the club colors, green and gold, the gold note being introduced in the monogram T. A. C.

Seated on Stage

When the stage curtain was raised for the meeting hour members and guests were greeted by a company of ten seated on the stage: Mrs. Daniel Campbell, president; Mrs. John C. Dunn, secretary; Mesdames R. A. Blackburn, A. W. Tower, M. B. Jones and C. E. Hutchinson, past presidents; Rev. Louis Tinning, assistant pastor of the Glendale Presbyterian church; Alfred F. Priest, architect, and Mayor Spencer Robinson.

Following the singing of "America," led by Mayor Robinson and accompanied by Mrs. Gertrude Champlain Erb, Mrs. Campbell opened the club meeting and with the consent of the assemblage dispensed with the reading of the club minutes.

A fitting introductory item of business was the reading by Mrs. Dunn of twenty-one applications for regular membership and fifteen for life membership. Names of the twenty-one regular members are found elsewhere in this issue of The Glendale Evening News with the entire membership of the club. The names of the life members are also included in the general list and a special list of the life members is to be found elsewhere in this paper.

Best Wishes

Congratuatory messages were read from Mrs. J. C. Urquhart, president of the Los Angeles District Federation; and from Arthur H. Dibbern, exalted ruler of the Glendale Elks' odge. Both expressed their regret at not being present at the opening event and congratulating the club on the new home and expressing wishes for happiness and prosperity. Mrs. Urquhart was not able to attend because of the ill-health of her husband, and Mr. Dibbern's lodge duties took him north for the evening.

MRS. DANIEL CAMPBELL
President of the Tuesday Afternoon Club

A message of congratulation was also read from Francis Goldwater, associated with the Behymer agency of Los Angeles.

Formal Presentation

The formal presentation of the building was of great interest. Upon introduction by Mrs. Campbell, Arthur F. Priest, architect, paid high tribute to the sacrifices, cooperation and ability of the club women, particularly Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the executive building committee and her assistants, and Mrs. W. E. Evans, chairman of the furnishings committee and her assistants. He told of the development of the building plans and of the pleasure he had found in carrying out these plans in consultation with the building committee. He praised Mrs. Evans and her committee for artistically furnishing the building. In closing Mr. Priest complimented the club members for the fine spirit they have displayed, and presenting the building to Mrs. Hutchinson he expressed sincerest wishes for success and prosperity in all future ventures.

Committee Work

Mrs. Hutchinson, past president, under whose administration the clubhouse site was purchased and the building begun, was greeted with hearty applause. In a most pleasing manner she sketched the work of the original building committee and the executive building committee with Mr. Priest, and told of the pleasure of the women in this work. She gave high praise to Mr. Priest, architect, and to Elmer Elliott, contractor, attributing to them a large measure of the success of the building venture.

Mrs. Hutchinson as chairman of the building committee presented the building to Mrs. Daniel Campbell. In thanking Mrs. Hutchinson and expressing appreciation for her faithful services Mrs. Campbell presented her with a large basket of varied spring flowers.

At this time Mrs. Campbell was complimented with a large basket of tulips and hyacinths, presented on behalf of the club by Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, first vice-president and chairman of ways and means; and by a large basket of roses and Easter lilies, presented on behalf of the Glendale Music club by Mrs. E. U. Emery, courtesy chairman. Mrs. Campbell also received a basket of roses from thirteen women friends of the Presbyterian church.

Offers Tribute

In responding, Mrs. Campbell paid high tribute to past president, builders of the club. She spoke of Mrs. F. G. Taylor, the first president, now deceased, in whose memory the president's chair was given; of Mrs. R. A. Blackburn, who was on the platform, under whose direction the club joined the state federation and also sponsored the Glendale library; of Mrs. E. W. Pack, now in Canada; of Mrs. Martha Morris, now deceased, whose picture occupies a place in the lounge room; of Mrs. Mary Gridley Braly, absent because of illness, who, with her husband, gave the wrought iron reading stand for the stage; of Mrs. A. W. Tower, who was on the paltform, under whose presidency the club purchased the first lot; of Mrs. May Pirtle Chase, deceased; of Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, a life member, who was on the platform, who was at one time district president; of Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, charter and life member, past president, and now chairman of the house; Mrs. W. W. Ramsay, who is now on a world tour; Mrs. E. H. Willisford, now living in Texas, and of Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, honored as chairman of the executive building committee.

"Welcome Home!" That was Mrs. Campbell's greeting to the club members as she sketched the evolution of the club quarters from a little room on Third street (now Wilson avenue), near Cedar street, to the present beautiful club home.

This welcome was followed by the invocation given by Rev. Louis Tinning.

The club guests were then cordially welcomed by Mrs. Campbell.

A bit of club history followed, Mrs. Campbell stating that for the four lots, the site of the new clubhouse, three lots on Central avenue and one on Lexington drive, $17,500 was paid; that the club women had $23,000 in hand to build their $83,000 building; that L. C. Brand, prominent Glendalian, had loaned them $50,000 at six per cent; that two women and eight men endorsed the club's note for $10,000, they were Mrs. Ella Richardson, Mrs. Minnie Patterson, H. E. Bartlett, A. S. Chase, Daniel Campbell, Clinton Booth, C. C. Cooper, C. H. Bott, Dr. Henry R. Harrower and T. D. Watson.

She made special mention of the work of Freeman McG. Kelley, landscape artist, who gave his services gratis in developing the clubhouse grounds. He was assisted by Mrs. C. W. Houston, second vice president.

In further explaining the club finances Mrs. Campbell stated that from the eighty-five life memberships $8500 was received; and that from 161 regular memberships received since last July, $1610 was realized, making a total of $10,110 to be spent on furnishings. She complimented Mrs. Evans and members of the furnishings committee for their efficient work and stated that as far as possible the money was spent in Glendale.

List of Gifts

Praise was given the support of the club sections and committees and in thanking them Mrs. Campbell read the pledges and gifts they have made for the new building. A list of these is included in the account of the housewarming given elsewhere in this edition of The Glendale Evening News. Mention should be made of the beautifully made and artistic piano lamp for the auditorium stage, given by the Arts and Crafts Section Number 1.

Mrs. Campbell also read a complete list of gifts to the club. Most of these gifts have received mention in the account of the housewarming given elsewhere in this edition of the Glendale Evening News.

Club Keeps Stride With City Growth

GLENDALE is today sharing in the happiness of Tuesday Afternoon club officers and members over their beautiful new home. There is no other organization that has kept more harmonious step with the growth of the city than has the Tuesday Afternoon club.

When Glendale was a community of 300 people with Glendale avenue and Third street (now Wilson avenue), its center, the Tuesday Afternoon club had its inception at an informal social gathering of eleven women. As the little town grew, the little club grew, each reflecting the growth and breadth of activity of the other.

Glendale's 300 per cent growth in the past ten years has been equaled by proportionate growth in the club organization. Glendale is today a city of over 35,000 inhabitants and has the nation-wide reputation of the fastest growing city of its size in the United States; and the Tuesday Afternoon club is an organization of over 790 members, with a beautiful club home and widely known for its standing in district and state federation affairs.

The kindred progress and achievements of city and club are bound up together in the prediction of great prosperity in the years to come and in the new club house one may see one of the city's real show places as well as a nucleus for cultured club and social activity.

LARGE CROWD IS PRESENT AT FLAG RAISING SERVICE

Impressive Ceremony Takes Place In Front Of New Home; Many People Inspect Fine Structure and Its Furnishings

WHILE a troop of khaki-clad Boy Scouts stood at attention, surrounded by a company of several hundred club members and friends, the Stars and Stripes were raised for the first time Monday afternoon over the new Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse at the corner of Central Avenue and Lexington drive, marking the opening of the new building and the realization of a dream the club members have dreamed ever since organization a quarter of a century ago.

It was an event long anticipated by club members and friends and long before the hour set for the flag raising ceremony Central avenue and Lexington drive were lined with automobiles and club members and guests grouped on both sides of the street.

MRS. A. H. MONTGOMERY
First Vice President of the Tuesday Afternoon Club.

Promptly at 2:45 o'clock H. Benjamin Robison, Scoutmaster of Troop 2, grouped eight Scouts about the flag pole, Arthur Barton, Floyd Craft, Horace Brown, Robert Eastman and Charles Wyman of Troop 2; and Charles Bosserman, Robert Ayars and Glen Cunningham of Troop 3. The company gathered for the ceremony, grouped about, the club officers standing on the entrance walk and steps leading into the social quarters.

Call to Colors

Assembly was called by Bugler Floyd Craft. He then sounded the "Call to the Colors" and after firing a cannon salute the flag was raised and the pledge to the flag was given by the entire crowd. The invocation was given by Rev. C. M. Calderwood, pastor of the First Congregational church and member of the Scout Council. Singing of one verse of "The Star Spangled Banner" was led by Scoutmaster Robison. The flag was a gift from Mr. and Mrs. John Robert White.

An added feature of this part of the afternoon was the presentation of a beautiful silk flag and standard for the club house auditorium. The flag is a gift from the General Richard Gridley chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution and the presentation was made by Mrs. S. C. Leppelman to Mrs. Lillian E. Dow, patriotic chairman of the Tuesday Afternoon club.

Throw Open Doors

The doors of the clubhouse were then formally opened, officers and directors receiving in the reception and lounge rooms; past presidents receiving in the foyer; and chairmen and curators, committee and section members serving on the entertainment committee about the building.

Receiving in the lounge room were Mesdames Daniel Campbell, A. H. Montgomery, C. W. Houston, John C. Lunn, Frank Ayars, M. E. Plasterer, H. E. Bartlett, J. T. Crampton, A. P. Findlay, E. W. Hayward, A. A. Barton and John Robert White.

During the afternoon punch and cakes were served in the banquet room by Mrs. Colin Cable, chairman of the hospitality committee and Mesdames Barton Manbert, W. E. Farlander, J. C. Waite, W. E. Cleveland, John King, Charles Temple, Albert Pearce, H. H. Pettit and Charles Jones.

Pleasing Feature

An enjoyable feature of the reception was the music furnished in the auditorium by the Arion Trio, including Mrs. Enona Hopkins, harpist; Miss Neva Childberg, violin; and Miss Mary Tyner, cellist.

For many months club officers and members have worked together towards funds for building and furnishing their new home and yesterday when they extended their hospitality to all Glendalians, hostesses and guests realized that sacrifice and tireless effort had not been in vain.

The clubhouse itself is indeed a masterpiece in California-Spanish architecture, the work of Alfred F. Priest of Glendale.

Mr. Priest designed a beautiful home for the club women to furnish, and the success attained by Mrs. W. E. Evans, chairman of the furnishings committee, and her assistants, Mesdames H. R. Boyer, C. O. Pulliam, W. P. MacMullin and Harry Lockwood was reflected in the compliments showered on them yesterday, predicting that the clubhouse will be widely recognized for its artistic furnishings.

In the original fund at the command of the furnishings committee there was approximately $5800, and this was augmented by an addition of $1500 from the non-section members, under the leadership of Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, chairman of ways and means, making a total of approximately $7300 with which to artistically and adequately furnish the new club home.

Even with unlimited resources furnishings are always a problem, but when given a limited fund and a building of the type of the new club house, a real problem is confronted, and Mrs. Evans and her committee members are deserving of the highest praise for executing their duties economically and artistically.

Necessities First

Realizing their limitation, Mrs. Evans and her assistants began with necessities. They first provided for the floor coverings, which was a big item because of the large floor space. They spent $3000 for this need.

Next they turned their attention to the windows, which required an expenditure of $1490.

There was then approximately $2800 at their command for the rest of the furnishings, and when one has visited the clubhouse and seen the attractive furnishings and arrangements he marvels at the cleverness of the furnishings committee.

The foyer is carpeted with a wonderfully fine heavy carpet, gray, shot with black. The carpet entirely covers the foyer and runs down the aisles of the auditorium and across in front of the orchestra pit to the exits at either side of the stage.

Curtains over the auditorium windows are of putty-colored friar's cloth, while the curtains at the entrances from the foyer and exits at the sides of the stage are of taupe velvet.

Period Furniture

In the entrances from the foyer the velvet curtains are double, Italian red hanging in the foyer and the taupe in the auditorium. An Italian table occupies a place on the stage.

Renaissance period furniture predominates. In the foyer just in front of the entrance and between the two entrances into the auditorium are two Spanish chairs, with mohair and needlework designs.

On the stairs leading up to the men's and women's parlors is heavy, coarse gray carpet. The parlors have not been furnished as yet.

Grass furniture was selected for the palm room and blends perfectly with the Bachelder tile fountain and the rustic background presented by the masses of plants and other greenery.

One of the big items on the floor covering list is the immense can-

STRUCTURE BRINGS FORTH SPIRIT OF OLD MISSIONS

Back to Century and More Ago, Yet Having Every Modern Convenience, Home Proves One of Most Attractive In West

IN the footprints on the old Indian trails leading across this peaceful valley to lands beyond the Green Verdugo Hills lies the record of the onward march of modern civilization. Dropping anchor in San Pedro harbor 150 years ago, and then journeying out Verdugo Road through the little village of Los Angeles, past the Plaza with its Church of the Angels and into this vast and fertile valley to the north and east, the early Californian sensed the great prosperity held in store by the coming decades.

This was the land God had graciously blest, and, as the Indians roamed over mesa and plain, and the Mission padres traveled back and forth on the Camino Real along their chain of missions, and the Forty-Niners looked upon this wonderland after their perilous journeyings over the plains, they were all inspired with the happiness in this western land and they strove together toward the development of its resources and perpetuation of its beauty and romance.

By the great Pacific ocean the brown-robed padres and faithful Indians built twenty-one missions, and the early Californians their homes. Each structure represented months of wearisome toil. From the rich adobe soil the Indians moulded huge bricks and curved roof tile; from the nearby mountains they brought timber for the beams, which they bound together with strips of rawhide.

Spirit of Beauty

In these church buildings and the haciendas on the scattered ranchos was wonderfully and immortally blended the Spanish simplicity and art and California's overpowering spirit of the beauty of God's great out-of-doors.

A journey down the Camino Real of today, past the ruins or restorations of the old missions and past some of the remaining buildings on the sites of the old ranches, is convincing proof that only in a California-Spanish type of home or public building is the real wonder spirit of California expressed.

And this California-Spanish atmosphere has not passed with the ages, but has become a dominating influence in western architecture.

Glendale's Tribute

Modern civilization has seized this great western state, and here in the peaceful valley at the foot of the Green Verdugo Hills stands Glendale, a thriving, modern city of more than 35,000 inhabitants.

Glendale's perfect tribute to California's early history and romance is to be found in the new home of the Tuesday Afternoon club, located at the northeast corner of Central avenue and Lexington drive, opened at a housewarming Monday afternoon and at a formal opening event last night.

The Tuesday Afternoon club house is a wonderful masterpiece in California-Spanish architecture and will add another laurel to California's national reputation for beautiful and unique club houses.

Most Artistic

With its two main entrances on Central avenue, the club house, with its brown plaster exterior, darker brown art stone decorations, artistic windows, brilliant roof tiles and long, low design, attracts the eye of travelers along either Central avenue or Lexington drive.

him two main entrances, the entrance into the foyer and auditorium on the north half of the building, and the entrance into the social quarters on the south half of the building. On the extreme south half is the porte-cochere, with a driveway leading from Lexington drive to the building and on out onto Central avenue. From the porte-cochere there is also a second entrance into the social quarters.

one approaches and mounts three cement steps onto a wide veranda, possibly fourteen feet in width and fifty feet deep, before the doorway.

Specially Designed

This facade with its specially designed brown art stone frame for the massive wooden door with heavy iron knob, eight small oblong windows with iron railings, and balcony window above the doorway is the alluring invitation to the visitor to enjoy the treasures that lie within the door.

The foyer is most adequate and awesome with its beauty. From it two doors lead into the auditorium; French doors out onto the north walk; French doors into the palm room to the south, and two stairways up to the men's and women's parlors and projection room. Two cloak checking rooms are on either side of the entrance.

Rough plastering, rich with stippling in silver and gold with black stenciling, is used in the foyer. Lighting will be from specially designed wrought iron fixtures.

A gray stain has been used on the stairway and woodwork leading to the parlors and projection room. The women's parlors are on the north side and the men's parlors on the south side of the entrance.

Projection Room

The projection room has been built according to the most modern developments and is metal lined and fireproof. Additional fire protection is found in the foyer, where a fire hose and equipment case have been provided at one of the entrances to the auditorium.

Blending with the artistic scheme presented in the foyer, the auditorium extending approximately 120 feet to the east and with a seating capacity of 764 persons, is a masterpiece within a masterpiece. A mauve color has been used in the base plaster on either wall. Above this is the gold stippled work with pilasters artistically stenciled in black, blue and gold.

An interesting feature of the auditorium is that the ceiling, which is carried out in the same design as the walls, has no lighting fixtures, the lighting provisions being in lighting troughs on the side walls and from massive lanterns hanging by chains attached to heavy iron arms coming from each pilaster. The troughs are oblong affairs done in colors to harmonize with the whole.

Well-Equipped Stage

A commodious orchestra pit is located just in front of the stage, which is perhaps eighteen feet deep and fifty feet in length and thirty-five feet from floor to top. A beautifully fashioned arch of Travatine marble is over the stage setting. The stage has six modernly equipped dressing rooms and ample space for scenery.

Under the stage is the room for the heating and ventilating system. Heating is to be by a gas-steam system.

There are six oblong windows on either side of the auditorium.

Going back through the auditorium into the foyer again one passes through French doors into the palm room, which is a delightful intermission between the north and south parts of the building.

Red Spanish tiles form the flooring, while rough plastering covers the walls and rough beams above will provide places for climbing vines and hanging plants. The palm room has an attractive wall fountain in brown tile. French doors lead into the foyer, into the dining room, into the reception room and into the lounge room.

Real Home Atmosphere

Another charming spot is the lounge room, where the real home atmosphere and hospitality of the club organization will be located. The rough plastering and colored stencil effects are also found in this room, but the real treasure is the beautiful, massive fireplace with art tile work and elaborate stencil design above. In this room has been installed rich, beautiful, wrought-iron lighting fixtures, specially designed on a candelabrum pattern, with long holder effects.

Ample lighting in the lounge room is provided by three French windows looking out on Central avenue; two into the palm room; one into the reception room and three onto the veranda before the main entrance.

The center of the social and administrative activities will be the reception room, with entrances from the south porte-cochere and from the Central avenue side. In entering from Central avenue one finds immediately within the door a telephone booth and cloak

Building Is Tribute To Cooperation

ANOTHER architectural masterpiece has been added to California's collection of wonderful club homes in the completion and formal opening of the Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse, and Glendale is in possession of a building deserving of real civic pride.

Glendalians had heard much about plans for the new club home during the past year. There were many demands on club members and friends to support the series of benefits for the building and furnishings fund. There were all manner of conjectures as to the success of the project undertaken by the club women.

But the club women plodded onward, facing seemingly insurmountable barriers and accomplishing what appeared impossible. Officers, directors, chairmen, curators and members strove together, making sacrifices and sharing common burdens. There was never an expression of discouragement or hint of defeat, but a steady march toward the goal that was reached last night, when the club body met for the first time in their new building.

There is no one personality or group of personalities that can be cited as being responsible for the great attainment, for the new building stands for the concerted efforts and devoted services of every member of the club, and every woman of the Tuesday Afternoon club is deserving of congratulation for her share in securing for her club and for the city of Glendale the beautiful new club building.

Mother's Memory

In memory of her mother, Mrs. L. W. Needham, Mrs. Frank Ayars presented the club with an attractive antique mahogany Spanish period table, occupying a prominent place in the lounge room. During her three years' residence at the Ayars home before her death, Mrs. Needham was a member of the club.

President's Chair

Presidents of the club, when on the auditorium platform, will occupy a beautiful Renaissance period chair, a gift from Mr. and Mrs. William Brown Dearborn and Mr. and Mrs. Campbell MacLennan, in memory of Mrs. Cora L. Taylor, Mrs. MacLennan's twin sister and first president of the club.

Non-Section Members

When Mrs. W. E. Evans and the furnishings committeee confronted a problem in furnishing the lounge room, the non-section members, rallied by Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, chairman of ways and means, raised $1500 to augment the furnishings fund.

Furnishing Costs

In planning for furnishings Mrs. W. E. Evans and her committee first considered floor coverings and window necessities. They spent $3000 for the floor coverings and $1490 for the windows. The remainder was for the rest of the furnishings.

INFORMAL SOCIAL SESSION START OF ORGANIZATION

Afternoon Tea Party, With Ten Women In Attendance, Proves Simple Foundation for Important Community Club

AS the sun went down behind the western hills Tuesday, November 14, 1922, and the lengthening shadows brought to a close an ideal California day, the cornerstone of the new club home of the Tuesday Afternoon Club at the corner of Central avenue and Lexington drive, was sealed in its place, to stand as one of the most important milestones in the history of the club organization, which has grown from an informal social gathering of ten women in 1898 to a modern, progressive women's club with a membership of over 790 women.

The laying of the cornerstone of the new building took place on the annual Charter Day and preceding the ceremony at the new building a regular meeting of the club was held at the Masonic Temple, with twenty-one charter members included in the company. It was one of the big events in the plans for the new club building. The ground for building had been purchased October 1, 1921, the ground was broken June 28, 1922 and the building started August 1, 1922. With each of these events the hopes and ambitions of the club women became more intense and with the laying of the cornerstone the realization of a dream of years loomed up before them.

MRS. C. E. HUTCHINSON
Chairman of the Tuesday Afternoon Club Executive Building committee.

Lots of Enthusiasm

The enthusiasm and hearty cooperation in planning and working that marked the days of building combined in the spirit that marked the organization of the club twenty-five years ago.

Glendale of twenty-five years before was a community of about 300 people, with Glendale avenue and Third street its center; no gas or electric lights, electric irons or electric cars; not too much water; only three blocks of cement sidewalk; no private telephones, automobiles, jitneys, movies, high school or library.

There were one store, one church, a livery barn, a blacksmith shop and a meat market. There were homes, fathers and mothers and children and even at that date Glendale had a charm all her own.

How Club Starts

There are those who look back with gratitude to the simple life in which on small incomes many comforts and pleasures were enjoyed. Among those who shared these blessings were two women, widows, one with two little girls and the other with three little girls. They were next door neighbors and good friends. Though their neighbors were kindly, thoughtful and courteous, it was rarely possible for them to attend the social affairs of the time, for these entertainments took place in the evening. These two women wished that there were some way in which they might meet other women socially, and often wondered what they could do to meet this seeming need. Mrs. Stearns, an active member of Los Angeles clubs, whose home was in Glendale, said to one of these two:

"Why don't you younger women of Glendale form a women's club? I am sure there is material here to warrant success. It only needs someone to start it."

The courage to form a club seemed to be lacking. As a compromise, it was decided to try the afternoon teaparty idea. As this innovation seemed to require a reason, the approaching birthday of Mrs. Philip Parker, January 9, 1898, was celebrated with a party at her home on "B" street.

Proves Successful

Eleven women were invited and ten accepted. The refreshments were tea, sandwiches, cake and candy. Though no special form of entertainment had been planned, the afternoon proved thoroughly enjoyable and at the close of the afternoon Mrs. Edith Morse invited the company to meet at her home Tuesday afternoon two weeks later.

After the second meeting the women agreed to continue their meetings on Tuesday afternoons, the hostesses being selected in alphabetical order. The number was limited to twelve, and when one dropped out another member was proposed. An early rule of membership was that an applicant should be married or thirty-five years of age.

In the meantime Glendale was growing slowly, and as there was no wish to be exclusive, selfish or hard-hearted, the number was increased to eighteen and later to twenty-eight, and finally the group became known as "The Tuesday Afternoon Club."

Without Officers

For three years the club met without an officer of any kind or a by-law of any description. A few good books were read, items of general interest talked about and many helpful ideas exchanged. The ambition to be in touch with other women's clubs developed. To gain recognition meant the dignity of regular organization and this was brought about by the unanimous selection of Mrs. F. Gilman Taylor as first president of the club.

The Tuesday Afternoon club continued to grow and was incorporated in 1908, receiving the charter November 10 of that year.

Live Force Here

The above information was related at the charter day celebration in 1915 by Mrs. Philip Parker, who presented to the club January 9, 1923, the anniversary of her birthday and of the club's birthday, a silver jardiniere containing twenty-five new silver dollars.

Today, in addition to being one of the prominent units of the district and state federations, the Tuesday Afternoon club is a live and active force in civic and social affairs of Glendale and is in possession of a club home, unequaled for artistic beauty and practical arrangement for service.

Fitting Tribute

The Tuesday Afternoon club's new home would not be complete without a tribute to motherhood, and this is found in the beautifully done portrait photograph of the late Mrs. Martha W. Morris, charter member and president during 1907-1908 and affectionately referred to as the "Club Mother." The portrait is the work of Miss Viola Sayre of Central avenue.

Mrs. C. M. Turck of La Crescenta is the donor of the portrait, which is mounted in an artistic old gold frame, from which the fine, motherly face of Mrs. Morris seems to smile a greeting to those entering the lounge room at the club house. The portrait is located on the long table in the south end of the lounge.

In addition to being a charter member of the Tuesday Afternoon club, Mrs. Morris was a charter member of the Glendale chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

MRS. C. W. HOUSTON

Mrs. Morris' death occurred December 9, 1919. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Margaret M. Gale of 122 North Cedar street, and Mrs. C. E. Stanley of 108 North Everett street, both of whom are Tuesday Afternoon club members.

was cover on the banquet floor. The floor is of fine maple and in order to preserve its beauty and use for dancing, the canvas will always be used except for dancing. It is brown canvas, harmonizing with the coloring of the room. Henna-colored door drapes were selected for the banquet room French doors.

The beauty of the little Italian tea room has been enhanced by the use of a green flax rug, butter-colored reed furniture, reed fern baskets and orange, black and yellow cretonne drapes.

In the hallway leading from the tea room through to the dressing room and reception room, a mauve colored flax rug is used.

The little dressing room is finished in gray and a little gray enamel dressing table and chair furnished this room. A special furnishing feature is the ivory dresser set marked T. A. C. in gold. The drapes are of cretonne with bright blue and rose design.

Reception Room.

In the reception room a Whitall Wilton rug in taupe with black over-figure is used. A Spanish period chair with red upholstery is a piece of furniture selected for this room by the committee.

In the reception room and elsewhere about the club house antique gold gauze with black bullion fringe has been used on the windows and French doors and on the sunburst windows over the round transoms. Of course some of the windows and doors have only velvet hangings, while other windows, such as in the kitchen and panty, have ecru net curtains. However, the antique gold is much in evidence in the prominent rooms.

The lounge room has won a place in the heart of everyone who has visited the building. It has green blue velvet drapes, lined with ecru sateen, hanging from clever wrought iron fixtures. These were the only furnishings purchased from the original fund.

The other furnishings in this room were bought with the $1500 raised by the non-section members. The rug is a thick Wilton in taupe. There is a large davenport and one chair in brown mohair with rose undertone. In addition there are two over-stuffed mohair pieces; a Renaissance inlaid, antique mahogany desk and chair; a small end table; another chair with blue and rose satin damask.

Some of the other things purchased by the furnishings committee were the sand and blue awnings for the windows looking out from the lounge onto Central avenue; $1100 worth of folding chairs and tables, accommodating 360 persons; coat racks for all dressing rooms, damask window shades, day bed for custodian's department, fixtures for dressing rooms.

The above facts represent the purchases of the furnishings committee with the fund at their command. Adding to their purchases are numerous gifts, which with countless floral greetings received Monday completed the house arrangement for the housewarming.

Number of Gifts

A visit to the building yesterday brought to one's attention the following gifts:

In the foyer, a chair from Keifer & Eyerick Undertaking company; a basket of pink roses from Keifer & Eyerick, a candelabrum done in polychrome work with rose candles from Mr. and Mrs. A. W. The curtain is blue and gold and soft rose, with fringe and hand painted border, while the back drops are in bronze; a silk flag given by the Glendale D. A. R.

Many Other Gifts

In the kitchen, three coffee urns from the Courtesy, Civics and Philanthropy committees; Direct Action gas ranges from Coker & Taylor Company.

In the pantry, banquet dishes from the Literary Section; glasses, cream and sugar receptacles, salt and pepper shakers from the Bible, Legislative and Parliamentary Law Sections.

Other gifts to be mentioned are a gift of $15 from the L. G. Scovern Undertaking Company; silver jardiniere from Mrs. Philip Parker; three putty colored door mats with black designs from John Robert White; the grand piano bought for the auditorium by the Music Section; the towel machines, dish towels and paper napkins bought by the Patriotic, Local Relief and Calling committees.

An added fact of interest about the furnishings purchased by the furnishings committee is that $2444 was spent in Glendale.

Electrical Fixtures

Visitors at the club house are unanimous in their praise of the beautifully designed wrought iron electrical fixtures, purchased from the J. A. Newton Electrical Company. The fixtures are different in the different rooms and it is difficult to decide which are the most beautiful.

Pasadena Guests

Mrs. Frederick Gilmor, treasurer of the Pasadena Shakespeare club, and Mesdames William K. Fogg, C. C. Edson and N. E. Kay, Pasadena club women, were guests at the club house-warming Monday afternoon.

Cost of Building

Figures show that the new club house cost approximately $83,000. Of this amount $23,000 was in the hands of the club, while it was necessary to borrow $50,000 from one source and $10,000 from others.

Another Compliment

The Tuesday Afternoon club holds a membership in the Chamber of Commerce, and prominent among the floral compliments on Monday was a large basket in the office from the Chamber of Commerce.

Splendid Stage

In addition to having a splendid stage the club house has it splendidly equipped. The gift from the Drama Section were the Terry cloth curtain and back drops, treated with a metallic effect.

Only 10 Present

At the first meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon club, January 9, 1898 with Mrs. Philip Parker, there were ten women present. There would be 792 present at a fully attended meeting today.

Honorary Member

Among the honorary members is Mrs. J. M. Banker of 228 North Glendale avenue, who enjoys the distinction of being the only original member with a continuous membership.

Cloak Racks

A big item on the furnishings list were the cloak racks for the dressing room and the two checking rooms.

Spent in Glendale

Of the original fund of $5800 for furnishings, $2444 was spent in Glendale.

Work on the club house was started August 1, 1922 and formally opened last night, Tuesday, March 13, 1923.

Auditorium Seats

Purchase of the 764 opera chairs in the auditorium came under the duties of the executive building committee.

Formal Organization

Formal organization of the Tuesday Afternoon club took place in 1904, the year book containing twenty-four names.

From the Library

From the staff of the public library was received an attractive set of book ends for the table in the lounge room.

Verdugo Hills

"A Quiet Noon in the Green Verdugo Hills," is the title of the picture painted and donated to the club by F. Grayson Sayre.

Thursday Club

Headed by their president Mrs. W. C. Mabry members of the Thursday Afternoon club attended the house-warming in a body.

Console Set

It was Mrs. W. E. Evans, chairman of the furnishings committee, who presented the wrought iron console set for the reception room.

792 Club Members

There were twenty regular members added to the roll of the club at the meeting last night. This brings the membership up to 792.

Stately Palm Trees

Adding greatly to the effect of the California-Spanish design of the building are the stately palm trees, purchased by the club from the city.

Reading Stand

Mr. and Mrs. John Hyde Braly, prominent Glendale residents, are the donors of the handsome wrought iron reading stand for the auditorium stage.

Tapestry Pieces

The two large French tapestry pieces given by Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Turck of La Crescenta, are wonderfully effective decorations on the north wall of the banquet room.

room. On the right is a business office, another cloak checking room, a delightful little parlor done in gray.

The remaining southeast portion of the building includes the dining-room with entrances from the palm room and the reception room; the Italian tea room; the kitchens and pantries, and the custodian's quarters.

General Beauty

Harmonizing with the rest of the building the large dining-room shares in the general beauty. Folding glass doors lead from it into the tea room and swinging doors into the kitchen. French doors provide exit onto a small porch to the east. The room finish is in the rough plastering with the gold stippling and colored stenciling, the ceiling beams being decorated with stenciling and exquisitely made wrought iron fixtures, carried out to give the candle idea.

A unique design is found in the Italian tea-room, whose walls are of a tan shade covered with latticed wood in apple green. Three French windows look out upon Lexington drive. In the wrought iron fixtures discs of amber-colored glass have been used and when the lights are turned on the color blends beautifully with the green-shaded woodwork.

Finally one comes to the extensive kitchen, with three windows with specially built sink with convenient equipment; also hoods for the gas ranges, and adjoining butler's pantry, service porch and storeroom.

Extensive Kitchen

On the extreme southeast corner of the building is located the custodian's quarters, a kitchen, bath, linen closet, dressing and living rooms.

Reinforced concrete, fireproof construction has been used throughout the building, as has also fine maple flooring.

The lot on which the building stands is 200 by 190 feet and was purchased by the club October 1, 1921. The ground was broken for the building June 28, 1922, and on August 1, 1922, the building was started. Ceremonies of laying the cornerstone took place on the club's charter day, November 14, 1922. The building cost $83,000.

Honors for the beauty of design and planning of the building go to Alfred F. Priest, architect, of Glendale. Construction work was ably handled by Elmer Elliott of Glendale, and the J. A. Newton Electrical company of Glendale, are deserving of the highest praise for the electrical fixtures.

Management of the building affairs for the club have been efficiently handled by the executive building committee, including Mrs. Charles E. Hutchinson, chairman; Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, Mrs. Daniel Campbell, Mrs. Andrew P. Findlay and Mrs. A. M. Hunt.

Fine Entertainment

An added pleasure of the formal opening was the entertainment provided by the Drama and Music sections in the presentation of the artistic dramatic sketch, "Women of History," written by Mrs. Mary Wolcott Green, A. B., and directed by Mrs. Raymond E. Chase, curator of the drama section. Assisting Mrs. Chase were Mrs. Warren Roberts, curator of the Music section, and Mrs. Charles A. Parker, musical director.

The presentation was featured by the initial use of the fine stage equipment given by the Drama section, and the wonderful grand piano, a gift from the Music section.

As the curtain was raised the audience saw an artistic stage setting with Miss Doris Packer, cleverly portraying the girl desirous of seeing the "Women of History."

Her desire was fulfilled, for with Mrs. A. P. Findlay as the presiding spirit of the genius of history, beautifully gowned and talented women appeared before the footlights, entertaining with historical reminiscences and music.

The characters were all well chosen and beautifully costumed, and Mrs. Chase and those taking part are deserving of praise for their artistic success. At the close of the sketch Mrs. Chase was the recipient of a large basket of flowers, a gift of appreciation from members of the cast.

INSTRUCT MAIDS HOW TO BE NICE

Charm School Will Teach Proper Deportment in War on Rudeness

By ROLAND KREBS.
For International News Service

CHICAGO, March 14.—The American people are atrocious eaters. They eat with their eyebrows as well as their jaws. They "duck" to meet the brimming fork and gulp, gobble and grab. It must stop.

With personality developed, a girl lacking in beauty can accomplish 100 per cent more than she who is only good to look upon.

Such are the convictions of Miss Irene A. Skinner, director of the "Charm School," which the Chicago Y. W. C. A. opened recently. Ninety-nine of each 100 applying for tuition, said Miss Skinner, are actuated by self-consciousness. Girls, reacting from the rudeness and vulgarities of the "flapper," are fearful of losing those little niceties which make for charm, she explained. The looseness of deportment bred by the war has penetrated most markedly into the ranks of the rich, particularly their children, and even among the clergy.

"There is no set rule for a girl acquiring 'charm,'" said Miss Skinner. "The conventions must be followed. I hope to strike a medium between the boldness of the 'flapper' and the 'primness' of the other extreme.

Bad Table Manners

"One of the things that suffocate charm is the tendency of persons to be agreeable and polite by 'yessing' one another to death. That word 'yes' is the cause of so much dullness in conversation. One should never answer just 'Yes' or 'No.' The reply should be 'Yes, but——' or 'No, and——' In that way conversation is tossed back and forth like a ball and does not die.

"Our bad manners are on display at the table. The universal vice is eating too fast. And would you believe that in this day and age 'nice people' still leave their spoons in their cups?

"The essence of politeness and charm is unchanged through centuries. Swift's definition of good manners still holds—to make those about us feel at ease.

"We are in too great a hurry. We say 'Pardon my wet glove,' instead of taking it off.

"At the end of this class year we shall have a reception to 'show off' what we have learned. Intelligent appreciation of kindly deeds is one solution. The other is the dynamic within the static."

Students Fix Limit to Use of Vanity Cases

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—Vanity cases will be O. K. among the girl students of the John Muir high school hereafter only on certain conditions. The citizenship committee of the high school has decided the cases may be used as carriers for pencils, pens, keys and other trinkets, but not for powder, rouge and other articles they were manufactured to carry.

Alleged Bank Wrecker Will Return for Trial

CHICAGO, March 14.—Abraham Goldman, father-in-law of the fugitive Joseph Baiata, charged with wrecking the First National bank of Warren, Mass., will submit without further opposition to extradition to Massachusetts, his attorneys announced here. Baiata known also as Marcino, is accused of having taken $212,000 from the bank's vaults.

Dressing Rooms

There are six dressing rooms located on the auditorium stage.

Hawaii University to Study Pacific Races

HONOLULU, March 14.—An appeal to the Pan-Pacific Union to sponsor a chair at the University of Hawaii for the study of the psychology of all Pacific races, in order to determine scientifically the mental differences of the various peoples o the Pacific, was made at a recent meeting of the Union here by Dr. Stanley Porteus, of the university faculty. The Union has taken the matter under advisement and probably will lend its support to the proposal. Dr. Porteus, in his appeal to the Union, pointed out that Hawaii, because of the many admixtures of Pacific races here, would be the ideal place in which to conduct such a study.

FRIENDS OF THE SCHOOLS

BE NOT DECEIVED. VOTE YOUR CONVICTIONS ON THE SCHOOL BONDS.

The propagandists of waste and graft are resorting to the same tactics of threat and intimidation to carry this election for the $500,000 school bonds that they used six months ago in their futile effort to extract a million dollars for the new high school from you. You beat them by a majority in every polling district then and can do it again. They told you that the $600,000 which you had voted with practical unanimity would not meet THEIR requirements and if you refused to give them a "cool million" your children could not have the benefits of high school education in Glendale. You did not believe them and said so by your ballots. Result: A magnificent high school plant to be built for $600,000 is now under construction!

Now, note this: The Glendale Press—the organ of the spenders—in its issue of March 13, contained this threat: "If the bonds are not voted, half-day sessions will result."

THAT IS ABSOLUTELY FALSE AND IS PUBLISHED TO INTIMIDATE YOU. What will be the effect of defeat of this scandalous proposition to give more than one-fifth of the proceeds of this bond issue to one school out of thirteen—to build for this NEW school on which $100,000 has been expended within the past year, a $35,000 auditorium and buy a lot from somebody for $15,000? This is in addition to giving this same school $57,850 for what may be considered legitimate school purposes. This $57,850 exceeds the apportionment for any other one of the 13 schools, and another new school only two short blocks from it is to get $49,050.

But what will be the result of defeat of this grab? Note this well:

NO ADDITIONAL SCHOOL FACILITIES CAN BE PROVIDED FROM BONDS VOTED AT THIS ELECTION UNTIL THE BEGINNING OF THE NEXT SCHOOL YEAR.

That is the answer to the half-day session threat made in the Glendale Press quoted above.

If this bond issue is defeated another election will be called promptly and you will be given opportunity to formulate and vote for a schedule stripped of the scandalous graft which lurks in the present one — and there will be ample time to make the money available for the next school year.

NO DISASTER WILL RESULT FROM DEFEAT of the proposition cunningly framed to make you accept or reject it IN ITS ENTIRETY.

Hit this scandalous apportionment made to conciliate one man and obtain his support for a $30,000 site in the northwest.

Fear not to vote "No" and again show selfish manipulators of school bond elections that you resent their assumption that they are the sole proprietors of our schools.

WE FAVOR AMPLE FINANCIAL PROVISION BY BOND ISSUES TO MEET THE REASONABLE REQUIREMENTS OF ALL OF OUR SCHOOLS, AND WILL SUPPORT ANY EQUITABLE AND BUSINESS-LIKE EXPENDITURE OF PUBLIC FUNDS FOR ALL LEGITIMATE SCHOOL PURPOSES EVEN IF THAT REQUIRES MORE THAN $500,000; BUT WE OPPOSE THE APPROPRIATION OF $107,850 PLUS $49,050—OR $156,900 — ON TWO NEW SCHOOLS within 2 short city blocks of each other IN ONE NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE THERE IS A TOTAL ENROLLMENT OF ONLY 594 PUPILS OUT OF A TOTAL ENROLLMENT OF 3961 PUPILS IN ALL THE SCHOOLS (11 in number), TO SHARE IN THIS $500,000 BOND ISSUE.

YOURS FOR THE SCHOOLS,
THE CALIFORNIA CLUB (of Glendale).

STOCKS, MARKETS

NEW YORK, March 14.—The highest prices established early in the day caused profit-taking on a large scale towards the close of the stock market and resulted in recessions. Baldwin Locomotive lost over 1 point and a loss of 1 point was also sustained in Studebaker. The petroleum issues were steadily bought while others declined, Pan-American issues being especially strong during the last hour. Philadelphia company showed a gain of over 2 points selling at 46½. General Electric showed a gain of 4 points.

Government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

Market Closes Strong

CHICAGO, March 14.—Erratic trading featured the grain market today. The market opened slightly higher with a show of strength, but began to sell off immediately. Later activity was resumed and values firmed up. From then on the market worked rather erratically, but closed strong. One of the bullish factors was a report of improved situation in export trade.

Wheat closed fractionally higher than the previous close; corn ⅛c higher to ¼c lower, and oats unchanged to ¼c down. Provisions closed irregular, lard higher, short ribs easier.

SECRET INQUIRY

WAUKEGAN, Ill., March 14 — A secret investigation of alleged attempts to influence men for jury service in the trial which resulted in the acquittal of Governor Len Small on a charge of misappropriating interest money on state funds, is under way, according to apparently authentic reports here today.

The non-replacement of divots by golf players continues to be the bane of greens committees throughout the country, and now the Olympic club of San Francisco has taken drastic steps to put a stop to a practice that is not only expensive, but does much injury to a course. Nothing is more provoking to a golfer than to walk up and find his lie is in a cup dug out by some player's iron into which he has not replaced the torn sod.

Announcement has been made that players who fail to replace their divots will be fined ten dollars for each of the first few offenses, after which there will be a cumulative punishment which will bar them from the use of the course for various lengths of time. It is to be made a point of honor for each member to aid in the enforcement of this rule, and censure will descend on a member who does not report a cas that comes to his notice. On this basis no member need feel any qualms of conscience in the matter of being an "informer."

We had occasion at one time to speak of the number of teams that are playing baseball during the winter in California. It may sound incredible to the average Easterner, who has been snowbound for the last few months, to know that in one leage there are 42 teams and inetaoicmfwypsrdl forty-two teams and in another there dere fifty-eight organizations playing regularly. There are scores of these leagues throughout the state. A number of the youngsters have been taken to the training camps by ciubs of the Pacific Coast league for tryouts. Professional managers look with favor on the encouragement of these leagues. They keep an eye on the players and it furnishes a fine field from which to cull promising material.

Intercollegiate polo on horseback—the maintenance of this, one of the most expensive of games—is something that strikes the average person as something beyond the pures of the collegian. Yet there will be a series of games played this month between the collegiate teams of Stanford University of California and the University of Arizona at Tucson. Three games will be played, March 22, 24 and 26.

There have been a number of universities that have taken up the game, but the horsefiesh involved is one of the obstacles that seems insurmountable to the general run of colleges. When it is considered that it took approximately $200,000 to finance each of the American or British teams that competed for the international title, one wonders where the money comes from for the boys. It all depends on how deeply you delve in the game. A far western team can make an eastern trip for about $10,000 and less.

As a general rule the amateur boxer is not a success as a professional ringster. There are exceptions, of course, but they are the exception rather than the rule. There is only one instance in ring history where a national or Olympic games world amateur champion has actually won the United States professional title in his class. That single instance is the case of De Genaro, who recently took the American flyweight title from Pancho Villa and now is in line to fight Jimmy Wilde for the world title in his class.

Jim Corbett was an amateur before he entered the professional ring, and held various Pacific coast amateur titles, but he never won a national amateur title. What he did as a professional is now ring history, and Corbett is still conceded as being probably the cleverest boxer, as opposed to the term fighter, who ever held the world heavy title. Corbett is probably the outstanding example of a former champion winning a world title.

Many other amateurs have made good in the ring, but none other outside of Corbett and Genaro have won American or world professional titles. Eddie McGoorty is a name that is world-famed, and he started his career as an amateur, in his early days being the Wisconsin state amateur champion.

Martin Burke is an instance of a former national amateur champion who has made good, though he has failed to reach the professional championship class. Burke won the national middle and heavy titles. Another former national amateur champion who comes to mind is Augie Ratner, who held the amateur welter title. He also made a name for himself in the professional ring, and there are undoubtedly others.

To get back to Genaro. He never won a United States national title, but he did better than that by winning the world's Olympic games flyweight title at Antwerp in 1920. The little Italian-American had to defeat four men to win the title. In his first fight he disposed of Nilson of Norway on points, and incidentally all his victories were by the decision route, rather than by the K. O. In the second round of the Olympic contests he defeated Rampignon of France and in the semi-final he beat Albert, also of France. The final contest was against Peterson of Denmark and the little American representative gave the Dane a boxing lesson he will never forget.

In the professional arena Genaro has long been considered the class of the little chaps, and while Pancho Villa actually won the American title by defeating Johnny Buff, there are many who believe that Pancho had the luck to be the first of Genaro and Villa to get a crack at the then champion. Prior to this contest fight Genaro had twice beaten Villa on points. When they met for the third time Genaro won the decision, and the American title. Now he is headed for the world title and Jimmie Wilde, the little Englishman, is in for a genuine contest when he goes against this hard-hitting little champion of Uncle Sam's who has risen from the amateur ranks to the first place in this country among the little men of his weight.

Dempsey to Box Firpo In November Is Report

NEW YORK, March 14.—According to a report in circulation here Jack Dempsey will fight Luis Firpo, the Argentine heavyweight who knocked out Bill Brennan, next November, in Buenos Aires for a million dollar purse.

The report further said Tex Rickard would act in an advisory capacity to the promoters of the bout, the date of which will not be made known until necessary legislation is passed to legalize boxing in Buenos Aires.

Jack Gleason Dies of Diabetes in New York

NEW YORK, March 14.—John J. (Jack) Gleason, formerly of San Francisco and associated with Tex Rickard in promoting the Jeffries-Johnson fight, is dead of diabetes. He was former abbott and dean of the Friars club here. At one time he was owner of the San Francisco baseball club.

Miss Ryan Is Winner Against Spain's Star

NICE, March 14.—Miss Elizabeth Ryan, California, defeated Miss Alvarez of Spain, in the second round of the women's singles today. The scores were 6-3, 6-3.

It is a specal trick of low cunning to squeeze out knowledge from a modest man who is eminent in any science, and then to use it as legally acquired and pass the source in total silence.

THEATRES

The GLENDALE

"The Worldly Madonna," featuring Clara Kimball Young, is the picture now showing at the Glendale Theatre, and gives the popular star an excellent opportunity to portray a dual role.

From glowing-eyed, rosy-cheeked novitiate in a convent to heavy-lidded, dissipated cabaret singer, in wonderful double-exposure effects, is the portion of Miss Young in this film of intense contrasts.

Where the one character calls for a calm, gentle nun, the other necessitates the affectations of a drug addict, the result bringing into play all of the star's great dramatic potentialities.

The story itself is most unusual and fascinating.

The T. D. & L.

"The White Flower," with Betty Compson in the stellar role, is the Paramount production now showing at the T. D. & L. Theatre.

Written and directed by Julia Crawford Ivers, it fairly breathes the languorous, enchanting spell of the Hawaiian islands.

Miss Compson plays the role of the half-American, half-Hawaiian girl who is in love with the young American, the "pineapple king" of the island. Many are the plans she lays to win the white man's love, resorting in the end to an attempt to do away with his fiancee, by means of a mysterious native rite.

In the last moment, however, her real womanhood asserts itself and she saves the girl she had planned to destroy.

RICKARD DENIES BRENNAN FAKED

Big Bill Did Not Dive to the Floor of Own Accord, Asserts Promoter

NEW YORK, March 14.—There never has been a "Barney" put on at Madison Square garden since he has been promoting bouts there, according to a statement made today by Tex Rickard. The statement was made in answer to veiled charges that Bill Brennan executed a sensational dive for the benefit of Luis Firpo followers in the twelfth round Monday night.

There was no dive, says Tex. Merely an involuntary bath.

"A boxer whose reputation can be built on such a flimsy foundation is no good to me or any promotor," he declared. "He must have something besides a guilty conscience on which to get by. I sincerely believe that Firpo is the best heavyweight prospect we have had in years, but that is as far as my interest in him goes. Naturally, I was hoping that he could be built up as a prospective opponent for Dempsey because that might mean money to me. But he cannot be made on an unnatural foundation, such as having men conspire to lose to him. I could pick out almost any heavyweight and make a championship contender out of him in this manner.

In Mind, Mostly

"As a matter of fact, most of the out and out fakes in boxing originate and are carried through only in the minds of the suspicious element that is always on the lookout for something wrong. In all the years I have had charge of boxing at the Garden, there has not been a shady bout pulled off there with my knowledge or consent or even tolerance. Yet almost every week some one starts a rumor, utterly without foundation, that such and so is to lay down. For my part, I can only say that upward of 4,000,000 persons have witnessed bouts I have conducted and I have yet to receive a serious complaint."

Rickard also denied any knowledge of the report that Firpo and Dempsey had already been matched for a bout at Buenos Aires in November.

George Sisler Is Out Of Game for Present

ST. LOUIS, March 14.—Baseball fans were considerably alarmed here today when word was received from the Browns training camp at Mobile, Ala., saying that George Sisler, who led the American league batters last year, would not appear at first base at the opening of the season.

Manager Lee Fohl announced that an attack of grippe which kept Sisler away from the training camp for several days, would likewise delay his appearance in the batting order. Sisler's throwing arm, hurt last season, is known to have bothered him this winter. If the throwing member has failed him, the Browns' pennant hopes would be given a big setback.

Siki Confident He Will Defeat McTigue

DUBLIN, March 14.—Battling Siki informed International News Service today that the odds have shortened on Mike McTigue's chances of winning the light heavyweight championship on Saturday because he himself is being heavily backed to win by McTigue's camp.

"I am more fit than when I knocked out Carpentier," Siki, Senegalese, said. "I am certain of winning but look for a fierce battle. McTigue's odds have shortened because his camp has realized my superiority and is heavily backing my camp. I have not made a single bet."

McTigue is equally confident. "I have beaten better men than Siki ever thought of beating," McTigue said. "I was never in better shape."

MANY PRISONERS MAY BE PAROLED

Inmates of Federal Jails Eligible to Freedom, Says Authority

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
For International News Service

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Three thousand federal prisoners, confined in government and state penitentiaries of the United States are eligible for parole, E. E. Dudding, president of the Prisoners' Relief society, announces.

The condition is unprecedented. Three years ago the number was less than 500, according to Dudding, who declared failure to parole these men is costing the government $100,000 annually and depriving the families of the prisoners of their support.

While not disputing Dudding's figures, the attorney general's office, final authority on approval of paroles, pointed out that the number of eligibles is ever changing. Officials said it would be impossible to fix an accurate figure.

Federal prisoners, sentenced to terms of more than one year, are eligible to parole, following service of one-third of their time. Their parole applications must have the approval of the federal board of parole and sanction of the attorney general's office.

Among those whose paroles have been refused by the government is Samuel Moore, a negro, said to be the oldest federal prisoner in point of time spent behind the bars, in the United States.

Moore has served thirty-three years of a ninety-nine-year sentence for murder. He is confined in Atlanta penitentiary. Moore got a year in jail for slashing a negress with a penknife when he was 17 years old.

Claimed Self Defense

While serving his time in the District of Columbia Moore killed a fellow prisoner with a shovel. He claimed he acted in self-defense, but the federal court found him guilty of murder in the first degree and he went up for life.

The negro was in the Delaware state prison and later at Albany, N. Y., and when the Atlanta federal prison was opened he was removed to that place.

Dudding, with other prison relief workers, has interested himself in Moore's case because, although approved for parole by the parole board, he was refused release by the higher authorities on the grounds of mental instability.

Pressure will be brought to bear on the government, according to Dudding, in an effort to obtain more prompt action on the many prisoners eligible to parole, as well as favorable action on the Moore case.

"After a prisoner has served the time required for parole eligibility he should be given a new chance in life, provided his prison conduct has been satisfactory," Dudding declared.

"Dr. Votaw's conduct of prison affairs has been satisfactory, and there is little criticism to make of the conduct of federal prisons, but there should be more efficient action on paroles.

Honolulu Bootleggers Imprisoned and Taxed

HONOLULU, March 14.—"Just because a man's a bootlegger is no reason why he shouldn't pay an income tax," says J. Walter Jones, collector of internal revenue for the Territory of Hawaii. And not only are the fines incidental to his profession not deductable as legitimate business expenses," according to Jones, but the bootlegger will also be expected to pay a tax on the food and quarters received as a result of his jail sentence for violation of the prohibition law, which must be reported as income.

"According to the federal law all persons are required to report every dollar of their income collected from every source." Collector Jones says. "Every source in this instance, would necessarily refer to the profits derived by a manufacturer of intoxicating beverages, regardless whether or not such beverages are legally or illegally manufactured."

Collector Jones' ruling has caused quite a stir among the local bootleg gentry.

SCHOOL VACATION

The Glendale High school students will enjoy their spring vacation week after next, according to an official decision reached last night by the board of trustees.

The meeting was devoted largely to the consideration of the relative merits of clock systems for the new plant. The purchase of a steel door eighty inches high and thirty-five inches wide was authorized for the vault in the new office.

Life is just one thing after another. Love is just two things after each other.

FORMER LABORER NOW U. S. ENVOY

Prince Gaetani, New Italian Ambassador, Worked in Montana Mines

By J. L. MEDDOFF,
For International News Service

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Nineteen years ago Prince Gaetani, the new Italian Ambassador to the United States, worked on the "sweat end" of a muck stick in the gold mines of Montana.

Today he holds forth at the Italian Embassy here, the representative of Europe's modern-day version of ancient Rome's government to the pioneer democratic country, the United States.

Like one of the fascinating Italian romances penned by Monzoni reads the rise of the Prince from a common laborer in the mines under an assumed name to his present post of influence and responsibility.

Was Mining Expert

From the time he left an American technical college to shovel ore in Montana, until Italy cast her lot with the allies in the World War, Prince Gaetani was successively a laborer, researchist and mining expert.

When he heard of his country's entrance into the war against Germany, the prince sailed at his first opportunity for Europe and became a second lieutenant in the Italian army. He served with distinction during the conflict, and upon its conclusion he returned to private life as a mining expert.

When control of the Italian government was usurped by the Fascisti, with Mussolini at the head, Prince Gaetani was selected to fill the all-important post of ambassador to the United States.

The prince completed a mining engineering course in an Eastern school in 1904 and immediately went west. There, under an assumed name, the scion of Italian nobility earned his upkeep by pushing a shovel in a Butte (Montana) mine, later going to Coeur d'Alenes as a mucker in the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine.

In 1907 the bettled miner, of his own volition, hiked it to Alaska where he labored for two years at the Treadwell Gold Mine on Douglass Island. There, as in Montana, he put in every spare moment in studying technical books on ores.

Designed New Mill

Two years later, in 1909, the prince was back in this country, worked in Idaho as a mineral researchist. Several years after that he attracted attention by designing a mill which still is in operation at Kellogg, Idaho.

Shortly after this Prince Gaetani was taken into a firm of mining experts in San Francisco, and it was while completing a mill for this concern that he learned Italy was to enter the world conflict.

The prince immediately wired for passage and spent the last week at the new mill testing samples. He slept in the roar and tumult of the thundering stamps, leaving positive orders that he be awakened every hour to personally take samples of the pulp. As soon as the mill was working successfully he went to San Francisco and departed for Europe.

Prince Gaetani enjoys a wide acquaintance among mining men throughout the West and holds the friendship of many "mine kings" not to mention the numerous underground toilers with whom he labored side by side for years.

He comes of one of the oldest Roman families and is said to be immensely popular in Italy because of his democratic tendencies.

Halt Allies' Move to Cancel Rhine Claims

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The United States will refuse flatly to permit the allies to write off the $30,000,000 received by the government for the sale of German ships in settling the $256,000,000 American claim for support of the army of occupation in the Rhineland, it was learned officially at the state department.

Although the United States does not intend to make any demands for general reparations, President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes were said to believe that this government is entitled to reparations on the same basis as the other allies in view of the fact that the other belligerents were paid for their military expenses out of the first payments received from Germany.

RODEO TO BRING DARING BIRDMEN

Formal Opening of Flying Field Scheduled for March 16th

Glendale's airport and aviation field will be formally opened on Saturday, March 17, when a specially arranged program of stunts by the leading aviators of the Southland will be staged at the municipal flying field, beginning at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Among the high lights of the Air Rodeo there will be exhibition flights by flyers of nation-wide reputations, who are being brought here to assist in the launching of the city's airport; parachute jumps by aerial daredevils; airplane races that will be replete with thrills every moment the planes are in the air; special stunt flying that is guaranteed to keep the spectators on tip-toe and to show most of them something new in flying; and other specialties that will fill the entire afternoon with excitement and that will send Glendale's municipal airport on its way with a rush that will make it known all over the country.

The meet is being held under the auspices of the Aero Club of Southern California and of the Commercial Aircraft Association of Southern California, whose representatives are working in close touch with the Glendale city authorities to make the formal opening of the Glendale aviation field an important event in the history of the city and of California flying history.

Within a short time a number of factories identified with the manufacture of airplanes and accessories will be erected on the field, thus bringing to Glendale a new industry that will add materially to the wealth of the city.

Exchange Club Hears Music at Luncheon

The Glendale Exchange Club met at noon today in the Harriet Mae Tea Room, 201 East Broadway, and discussed matters of civic interest.

Two soprano solos were sung by Miss Marie Oliver of 1314 North Central avenue. Both of them were well received. They were: "Jocelyn" by Goddard, and "Out Where the West Begins." Miss Marie Williams of 1219 North Brand boulevard, who studied music abroad, was the accompanist.

Capt. D. Ripley Jackson presided as president of the club. Its secretary James H. Howarth, distributed new lapel emblems.

NURSE TELLS OF PUPILS' ILLNESS

Physical Defects Corrected In Twenty-three Cases, Report Shows

Twenty-three physical defects among grammar school pupils were corrected last month, according to the report of Mrs. Helen S. Tupper, school nurse submitted to last night's session of the board of education.

Seventy-eight communicable diseases were reported. However, sixty of these represent an epidemic of measles. Other cases were three cases of diphtheria, twelve cases of scarlet fever, three cases of chicken pox. It was necessary to exclude fourteen children from school.

Children in the following numbers were referred to physicians: for defective vision, 7; for defective hearing, 2; for defective breathing, 24; for dentistry, 6; for throat trouble, 38.

The report stated that 319 children had been examined during the month and 55 new defects discovered.

The board of education was represented last night by David J. Hibben of 123 East Laurel street; Dr. P. O. Lucas, 115 South Verdugo road; Mrs. Nettie C. Brown 201 Milford street, and E. H. Learned of 1543 Glenwood road. Mrs. Eva C. Barton of 630 North Howard street was absent.

The next meeting of the board of education will be at 1 o'clock March 22, when, according to law, the votes in tomorrow's election will be canvassed.

Our alarms are much more numerous than our dangers, and we suffer much oftener in apprehension than in reality.

IS SCHOOL BOND ELECTION VALID?

'Vote Yes' Circular Seems to Have Disenfranchised a Great Many Voters

Editor The Evening News:—Is the bond election invalidated by error or trickery?

A "Vote Yes" circular put out by the school authorities, presumably at public expense, contains this paragraph: "Polling places: For those living south of the center line of Colorado street—Glendale Avenue school. For those living north of Colorado street and south of Doran street and east of Jackson street—Wilson Avenue school. For those living north of Doran street and west of Jackson street—Central Avenue school."

Whether by mistake or design, this circular leaves out of consideration all of that great body of voters living between Colorado and Doran streets west of Jackson street, all of Verdugo Woodlands and Verdugo road north of Doran street. These districts contain thousands of voters who are in effect disfranchised under the "instructions" contained in this circular. No modification or correction of this error appears to have been made on the initiative of the school authorities, although they have been aware of its existence for several days. The Glendale News stated that voters in these distranchised districts could offer their ballots at the Wilson Avenue school, and we concur in this.

HOUSEBOAT TRIP IS NEARING END

Harding's Pioneer Battles Tide and Sands to Reach Miami

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
For International News Service

FLAMINO HOTEL, Miami Beach, Fla., March 14.—Still battling doggedly against the whims of Florida's tides and sands, the houseboat Pioneer, bearing the president and Mrs. Harding, made slow progress towards this place today, the southernmost point to be touched by the chief executive on his vacation away from official duties in Washington.

The Pioneer was due to reach Miami today, but whether she would do so or not depends largely on the caprice of the sand and the wizardry of "Big George" Williams, a six foot black pilot, who has performed miraculous deeds in manipulating the houseboat from Palm Beach.

Early today the Pioneer was less than twenty miles from Miami, but the distance may be negotiated in three hours or forty-three. The president's plans after reaching Miami, are as uncertain as have been all the others on this southern caravan. It is probable a stop of four or five days will be made here, in which time Mr. Harding plans to take a fishing trip of a couple of days, leaving Mrs. Harding to continue her recuperation on the sands of Miami Beach.

LOBBY PREPARES TO WAGE BATTLE

Reapportionment Fight Is Subject of Committee Hearing Thursday

Special to The Evening News

SACRAMENTO, March 14.—Reapportionment, the biennial bad dream of San Francisco, comes before the assembly committee of the legislature on Thursday afternoon. A lobby from Los Angeles and southern California is here to emphasize the necessity of at least a compromise.

Indicative of the feeling, when Los Angeles announced its city directory showed more than 900,000 population, San Francisco publicity experts gave out a story that within an eight mile radius of Goat Island more than a million people now reside.

San Francisco refuses to admit that Los Angeles has taken first place on the Pacific coast, although the world at large knows it to be true. It is this defensive attitude that affects reapportionment which in reality is a moral issue and not political.

The labor and liquor politicians of San Francisco openly admit that if Los Angeles obtains its just representation they will lose what little control they have left. It was indicated in an article published locally that Governor Richardson would be glad to see the Tom Finn clique cleaned out of politics, which gives rise to the hope that he will use his influence in forcing the issue of reapportionment.

BONDS INDORSED BY ASSOCIATION

School Board and Allotment Of Money Are Scored By Speakers

The West Glendale Advancement Association met last night in the Columbus school, and, after some discussion, indorsed tomorrow's grammar school bond election.

Motion embodying such action was made by Matt M. Young of 412 West Milford street who acted as secretary during the meeting. Owing to a total attendance of less than twenty-five, the vote was small.

Alex Mitchell of 2001 Kenneth road was the principal speaker in favor of the bonds. He said that he had reason to believe that the bond issue would only increase taxes about 43 cents on a $6000 piece of property and that he for one would be more than willing to pay several times this increase in order that school children may have the proper advantages.

"It would be a fine thing," he remarked, "to herald to the whole world that the fastest growing city in the United States defeated bonds when the schools actually need the improvement."

Grey Fights Bonds

John R. Grey of 667 West Doran street was the principal speaker in opposition to the bonds. He objected to the apportionment of money in the budget. He asserted that the greater percentage of taxes and a greater number of school children come from west of Brand boulevard and that this section of the community was entitled to greater consideration.

Mr. Mitchell made the point that "half a loaf is better than none." He called attention to the fact that the budget provides $30,000 for the purchase of a site in the northwest for a new intermediate school.

Instead of adding an auditorium to the Glendale avenue intermediate school and making other additions at a cost of $107,000, according to Mr. Grey, it would be better to put this sum into the construction of a suitable building on this site at once.

Raps School Board

Rudolph Streit of 346 Pioneer drive, president of the organization, also spoke in opposition to the passage of the bonds. He characterized the grammar school board as "recklessly extravagant" and inefficient. He stated that the failure of the bonds to carry probably would result in its resignation which would be a good thing for Glendale.

"Certainly I don't want to go on record as begrudging the children education," asserted Mr. Streit. "Our only hope lies in the children. But you are putting all the money in wood, mortar and stone instead of in the children's heads."

Mr. Grey expressed his opinion that the defeat of the bonds tomorrow would not have serious effects. He pointed out the fact that the present high school plant will be available for grammar school pupils next fall. He said that the rejection of the bond issue would be doing the public and the board of education a favor because it would be forcing action on the re-organization of the school system.

"This is an emergency case," stated Mr. Mitchell. "If reports are right, Glendale is growing at the rate of about 600 persons a month or 7000 a year. I am under the impression that two wrongs do not make a right."

Affiliation with the civics committee of the Chamber of Commerce was rejected after some discussion. An invitation was extended by George B. Karr of 1152 North Louise street, chairman of this committee.

See Peace Prospects In Allied Agreement

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The agreements just reached between the French and Belgians at Brussels are rapidly bringing the opposing forces in the Ruhr to what probably will prove to be a decisive test of strength, administration officials said.

The test will pave the way to some sort of intervention, it is believed, but several more weeks must elapse before there can be anything conclusive.

Meanwhile, the American government is pursuing the definite policy marked out by Secretary of State Hughes of making no further overtures until there has been some indication of the principles that his good offices would be welcome.

Problem of Creation Is Revivalist's Topic

So well attended was the address given at the Glendale Presbyterian church last night by Dr. Robert A. Hadden, that announcement was made this morning that the church auditorium is to be used for the meeting tonight in order to accommodate the crowd.

Dr. Hadden will speak tonight on "The Problem of Man," answering the questions, "Is man a creation or an evolution?" and "Did he spring from God or a gorilla?"

Last night he spoke on "The Problem of Creation," showing that if men would come to God's word honestly and with open minds, the difficulties would disappear. He compared Scripture with Scripture to show that God is actually the Creator, and that any other suggested solution of the question is only guesswork and speculation that will not stand for a moment in the light of Scriptural revelation.

SCORES POLITICS IN BOND ISSUES

Places Heavy Tax Burdens On Next Generation, Writer Declares

Editor The Evening News:—The time is here when it becomes necessary to add to the school facilities of Glendale in order to provide for the additional children coming with our increased population, yet, in spite of the fact that California taxpayers contribute fabulous sums for "educational" purposes, there is no provision made, either in lands or finances, to provide these necessary facilities. Governor Richardson, out of his broad knowledge of state affairs, gained through intimate personal contact through a series of years states that:

Must Practice Thrift

"Extravagance in educational matters has run riot during the past few years. This budget shows an increase of $8,618,627.60, or 23 per cent, in the past two years. Politicians in the guise of educators have squandered the people's money with a lavish hand, and have denounced advocates of thrift as enemies of education.

"A great political organization has been built up which has cost the people an immense sum, but has added little to the value of education given school children. The laws have been cunningly amended so that supervisors, school boards and boards of education have little jurisdiction over expenditure of money, and hence cannot check extravagance. The people are loud in their protest as indicated by hundreds of complaints received by me, but they are unorganized and unable to cope with the schemes of certain political educators.

"The expenditure of school money in this state must be put on a business basis and the schools must not only teach, but practice, thrift. Educators should be left in control of educational matters, but sound business men should be in control of expenditures."

Thus we see why the citizens of Glendale, in common with other California cities, are unable to provide for a businesslike administration of school affairs through their city charter and must follow the antiquated and burdensome method of so-called mass meeting to appoint a committee to instruct the Board of Education to call an election to vote the last dollar possible for costly grounds and buildings, thereby adding unnecessarily, more weight to the burden of debt to fall upon the shoulders of our boys and girls when they become men and women and essay to fight the battle of life for themselves; to establish those bulwarks of our republic—the homes of our country.

Limit Demanded

Voters! A school election is called for next Thursday to vote an additional half million dollars of bonds (the limit), and in addition to many of you being practically disfranchised, owing to the operation of those "cunningly" framed laws before mentioned, you will be absolutely prohibited from exercising your judgment on the necessity of the various items making up the huge total and compelled (intentionally) to swallow the whole program because you know some expenditure is absolutely necessary, and the expectation is that your desire to provide needed relief will outweigh any doubts you may have on some of the items.

This matter has been put squarely up to those having charge in a request for an itemized ballot, and it has been refused; once before in Glendale school history a similar attempt to force the voters was made, and it met with a merited defeat, after which an itemized ballot was provided of somewhat less amount, and every item carried, showing the fallacy of the argument that "each district will vote for its own portion and against all the others, whereby all will be defeated."

Are we a class of people willing to submit to being dictated to by "political educators" to further their own ambitions, or will we look to the future welfare of our children and refuse to add unnecessarily to the present grievous tax burdens which will later fall on their shoulders?

The exigency is great, and the appeal has been made to you earnestly on that ground.

The decision is yours.

G. B. WOODBERY.

Glendale, March 12, 1923.

POLITICIAN TRIES SOCIOLOGY TEST

Hires Pardoned Convicts to Work on Small Farms on Manila Estate

By International News Service.

MANILA, March 14.—Frank W. Carpenter, who has been right-hand man to every governor-general of the Philippines from Taft to Wood, and who succeeded General John J. Pershing at Zamboango as first civil governor of Mindanao and Sulu is indulging two sociological experiments on his large estate ten miles from Manila. One project is dividing 15,000 acres of the estate into small fruit and poultry farms and selling them on easy terms to Filipinos, Chinese and Japanese. He not only wishes to provide homes for thousands of poor families, but to produce the fruits, vegetables and poultry products that are now imported into the islands, chiefly from China.

Hires Criminals

The other experiment is employing murderers, assassins, highway robbers and bandits whom Governor-General Leonard Wood has pardoned from Bilibid prison after they have served their long sentences. Such men have good prison records; their pardon has in every case been recommended by the pardon board.

Carpenter, a student of humanity, pre-eminently successful in dealing with men of every type, calls such crimes "crimes of primitive justice;" but if a man were guilty of stealing from his employer, malversation of funds, sneak thievery, criminal breach of trust, public or private, it would indicate to him a fundamental weakness in the fibre of the soul, and he would not employ such a man.

Bars Liars, Thieves

"Two things I will not excuse—lying and stealing. Never lie to me, even about the most trivial matter; never steal or pilfer, even the most valueless thing. What you did that brought to prison is with me as if it had never been done. You have been punished; you bear good prison records; forget the past and live like new men. Our relations will be similar to those of father and son."

Thirty such men are now working on Carpenter's ranch. They are for the most part men of the peon class, very probably driven into crime by unbearable conditions imposed upon them by their "amos," or masters, and the opportunity Carpenter gives them is by far the best they ever had in their lives.

ANCIENT TURTLE COULD NOT SWIM

By IRENE CORBALLY KUHN
For International News Service

HONOLULU, March 14.—"It's up to a tortoise to take care of himself in a flood. Whoever heard of a tortoise that couldn't swim, anyway?"

Such was one-half of the conversation that ensued between Otto Ludloff, superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and an overworked keeper at the Kapiolani Park Zoo here recently, following the rescue by the former of a 100-year-old land tortoise which had been forgotten when the terrific storm which hit Honolulu recently drove all the keepers distracted in their efforts to get the emus, kangaroos, camels, cockatoos, bears and what not, to safety, when a veritable cloudburst flooded the park and the zoo.

Tortoise Abandoned

What Ludloff said isn't recorded. Were it not for his self-sacrificing efforts, however, the centenarian tortoise, presented years ago to the late King Kalakaua, would have passed out, much to the regret of those old residents who take tourists to the Zoo to show him off.

While the storm was at its height and the water was rapidly rising in Kapiolani Park there were frantic calls from the Zoo for assistance in getting the animals and birds to safety. Ludloff, safe at home a few miles away from the park, was one of those called in to help. When he arrived at the park he asked if the land tortoise had been removed to a place of safety.

To his horror he learned that the Zoo officials, believing the old shellback could swim and would enjoy the storm, had left him to his own devices. Ludloff went to the place where the tortoise's home used to be. There, making a brave fight, clinging tenaciously to a wall and with only the tip of his snout sticking out, the S. P. C. A. Superintendent found the old fellow. He plunged in and rescued him, which in itself is a worthy feat when one remembers that a 100-year-old tortoise weighs as many pounds usually as he has years. Mr. Ludloff got behind and "pushed" with a plank, with the result that the granddaddy landlubber was rescued.

Border points were ordered especially watched to prevent the crossing of the couple into Mexico. The girl left her home yesterday, and the first indication her parents received of her flight was through a note she left. The message read:

"I am running away to be married. I am going to Mexico."

The father of the girl is H. E. Riley of El Monte. Dorothy is said to weigh about 120 pounds, is five feet, two inches tall, blonde, and wore a blue suit when seh left home.

Aviators Adopt New Call for Assistance

LONDON, March 14.—Airmen now have their own "S O S" call.

At a meeting in London of representatives of the leading European aircraft manufacturing countries it was decided that the words "May-Day" should be the international aircrafts distress call.

"May-Day" was selected as being the nearest equivalent of "M'iadez," the French for "Help me."

The universal distress call "S O S" was ruled out owing to the sound "S" being difficult to hear by wireless telephone.

HELICOPTER FLIGHT IS SUCCESS

New Flying Machine Goes Straight Into Air

Dr. De Bothezaat.

Photos show new government helicopter just completed for United States Air Service, which has been undergoing tests at McCook Field, near Dayton, Ohio. The machine rose straight up in the air and remained aloft for a specified period. Officials believe it will prove more stable and safe for certain kinds of flying than the types now in general use.

DAYTON, O., March 14.—What is declared to be the first successful helicopter ever constructed in the United States is undergoing a series of rigid tests at McCook Field in this city. It represents an expenditure of $200,000 by the United States government, and the fact that it rises vertically from the ground and has remained in the air for one minute and forty seconds, according to official announcement, leads to the prediction of scientists and engineers at McCook Field that it will soon be brought to a stage of development making it practical for aerial transportation.

The announcement issued by the United States Army Air Service calls attention to the fact that it was just twenty years and one day from the time that Wright Brothers made their first flight, which covered a period of but fifty-nine seconds, that Dr. George De Bothezaat, Russian inventor, realized fulfillment of his dream of rising vertically.

The honor of making the initial flight with a helicopter went to Major Thurman H. Bane, Commandant at McCook Field, who has since retired.

Secretly Built

Development of this new aircraft was carried on in secret. A special hangar was erected at McCook Field, screens were erected about windows and entrances, and an armed guard was maintained all the time in order to prevent prying eyes from seeing what was going on.

However, with the successful flight the veil of secrecy was lifted, and a month later the great secret was given to the world.

Dr. De Bothezaat began work on the helicopter at McCook Field in July, 1921. He was assisted by engineers and technical men at the field, but the principles along which the helicopter was constructed were his own, and he is recognized as the actual builder of the plane in the Army Air Service announcement.

It is declared that the newly perfected heavier-than-air craft will revolutionize the science of aviation in that it rises straight from the ground and can then be made to soar away in any direction.

Safety in Stability.

The inherent stability of the ship, it is claimed, renders it much safer than ordinary airplanes in that it can be glided to the ground from any altitude with a minimum of danger.

It has four propellers, with a combined blade area of 900 square feet. These are operated by a 170-horsepower motor.

During the tests now being made at McCook Field it is expected to attempt an endurance flight. An effort will also be made to set an altitude record.

Even before the United States entered the war experiments were conducted in the hope of producing a helicopter. None, however, proved successful until December 18, when the De Bothezaat helicopter made its maiden flight.

Among the men of prominence who have seen the new machine in action are Major-General Mason J. Patrick, Chief of the Air Service; General William Mitchell, his aide, and the only flying general in the world; Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War; Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce; Colonel E. A. Deeds, head of the Aircraft Production Board during the war, and C. F. Kettering, who contributed many scientific inventions to aircraft during the war. His chief contribution was an automatic airplane capable of dropping a bomb on any spot within a radius of 80 miles. This automatic plane was a strict war secret, and very little if anything has ever been published about it for the reason that the war ended three months too soon for it to be put to a test on the western front.

Official Announcement

The announcement concerning the helicopter, as issued by the United States Army Air Service, says:

"The first flight of the De Bothezaat helicopter was made by Major Thurman H. Bane, Commandant at McCook Field (who has since retired). The total duration was about two minutes, and the highest altitude reached was ten feet.

"The start was directly upward, and every ascent and descent was made without the slightest outside assistance. The whole flight was steady and the landing very smooth.

"In the air it demonstrated the highest grade of inherent stability. It was witnessed by officers and employes at McCook Field.

"The building of the De Bothezaat helicopter was started in July, 1921, and done under secret direction of the United States Air Service Division.

"In order to appreciate the full meaning of this performance it is well to remember that the first airplane flight made by Wright Brothers on December 17, 1903, lasted only fifty-nine seconds. It is interesting to note that the city of Dayton, the birthplace of the first successful airplane, has now produced the first successful helicopter.

"It is also worthy of mention that the helicoper was built at McCook Field, without any preliminary tests, on the sole basis of computations made by Dr. De Bothezaat and based on his two propeller theories, published by the National Advisory Committee at Washington.

Important Results

"The behavior of the helicopter in the air demonstrated in fullest manner what important results can be obtained by adequate scientific methods."

Dr. De Bothezaat is an international figure in aeronautical and scientific circles. He has been interested in aviation for the last 15 years. He has published books and papers on scientific subjects for 40 years. He is the author of the first book on airplane mechanics, published in Paris in 1911.

A number of his airplane inventions are in use at McCook Field and other air stations.

Hawaii Is Increasing Output of Pineapples

HONOLULU, March 14.—Considerable increases in size of the fruit and a gain of almost 50 per cent in the pineapple yield per acre as a result of the use of the "paper mulch" process are reported by James D. Dole, president of the Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd. In making his report, which covers a period of experimentation of three years, Dole gave notice that the company hereafter will charge a royalty of $25 per acre per crop for use of the process on plantations not owned by the company. The Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd., obtained exclusive rights for Hawaii to the mulching process shortly after its invention by C. F. Eckert. For the past year the company has been permitting other growers to use the process at a nominal charge in order to demonstrate its value.

Figures prepared by Mr. Dole show that the process has brought about an average increae of .973 pounds, or 27.47 per cent per pineapple in the plant crop. It is estimated that the average increased yield per acre, is eight tons, having a value of $240. The paper cost per acre is $100 and the royalty $25. This gives an added increased revenue of $115. In addition, the paper process, it is said, saves $45 per acre on weeding.

UNCLE WIGGILY'S TAFFY

"Uncle Wiggily, are you going out again this evening?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy of the bunny rabbit gentleman as he sat in his easy chair in front of the fire after supper.

"Going out again? Well, really, Nurse Jane, I hadn't thought of it," replied Uncle Wiggily. "But, of course, if you want me to——"

"Oh; it isn't anything special," answered Nurse Jane. "But I am hungry for a bit of candy and——"

"Oh, ho! Say no more! Excuse me for interrupting you, but I have a fine idea;" cried the bunny genteleman. "I could eat a bit of sweet stuff myself. So I'll make some taffy!"

"You'll do what?" cried Nurse Jane in surprise.

"I'll make some taffy," repeated Uncle Wiggily. "There is no need for me to go out to the store to buy candy. The other day at the Bushytail squirrel house I learned how to make maple sugar. To make taffy is much easier. All I need to do will be to boil up some sugar and molasses.

"You sit still, Nurse Jane, and I'll go out in the kitchen and make some taffy. Then we'll each have some. It will be quite jolly, I think."

"Do you think you can do it?" asked Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"I'm sure I can," answered Uncle Wiggily, confident-like.

Nurse Jane didn't like to think of what her kitchen would look like after Uncle Wiggily had been making taffy in it, but she was a good soul—was Nurse Jane—so she let Uncle Wiggily try.

Twinkling his pink nose and whistling a jolly tune, the bunny rabbit gentleman hopped into the kitchen. There he got out the molasses jug and the box of sugar. He mixed the two sweet things together and put them on the stove to boil.

"Now I'll grease some pans into which to pour the taffy when it has boiled enough," thought Uncle Wiggily to himself, for he knew that taffy was sticky—very sticky, indeed—unless you handle it with greased paws and pour it into greased tins.

"How are you coming on, Uncle Wiggily?" called Nurse Jane from the sitting room. "It smells most delicious!"

"The taffy will soon be ready," answered Uncle Wiggily. He tried a few drops of the boiling candy by letting them fall into a cup of cold water, and when the drops came out hard then he knew the candy was ready.

"Now, I'll your it on the buttered tins," he said. 'Don't come out, Nurse Jane, he went on, as he thought he heard a noise as if the muskrat lady were coming to the kitchen to see about the taffy. "I'll soon have it ready for you."

"Oh, you will, eh?" suddenly growled a voice at the back door, and as it opened in came the Woozie Wolf. He it was who had made the noise. "Will you have your ears ready for me to nibble?" snarled the Wolf.

Uncle Wiggily knew not what to say. He looked at the Wolf and then at the hot molasses taffy just poured into the buttered tins.

"Well, I'll see what you have here—it smells good, whatever it is," said the Wolf, "and then I'll try your ears."

He reached forth a paw and took up some of the hot taffy. Then he howled and tried to drop it.

"Ouch! Wow! What in the

The hot candy stuck to both paws.

world is this burning stuff?" cried the Wolf. "What is it?"

"Oh, just taffy," answered Uncle Wiggily. "Put it down if you don't want it."

"That's just the trouble! I can't put it down! It's stuck to my paw and it's burning me more and more all the while! Ouch!" howled the Wolf. He tried to pull the taffy off one paw with the other, but the hot candy stuck to both paws because there was no butter or grease on them. "Oh, this is terrible! Terrible;" howled the Wolf, and out of the bungalow he ran to jump into a snow bank to cool his burning paws.

"Well, he didn't spoil much of the taffy," said Uncle Wiggily. "There is enough left for Nurse Jane and me," and so there was, and very fine it tasted. But as for the Wolf—well, it served him right.

And if the rubber on the lead pencil doesn't bounce up and down and bump the nose of the rag doll I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the paper bag.

APPARATUS AND DEVICES

RADIATION RESISTANCE

Obviously, in the case of both receivers and transmitters, it is essential that all possible steps must be taken to reduce energy losses. Principal among these precautions is the elimination of all possible resistance. Eddy current losses and those which occur in the antenna system and tuning coils, all of which vary inversely as the square root of the wave length, can be reduced by eliminating extraneous conductors from the field of the tuning coils and the antenna, in the case of the eddy losses, and by providing better conducting paths in the cases of the antenna and earth systems.

Dielectric losses, such as are occasioned by vegetation, or by artificial structures coming within the field between the antenna and earth or ground, can only be eliminated by removing their causes.

Leakages due to "brushing" or "corona" discharge or insulators must be tackled by attention to antenna voltage and the design of the insulators themselves, any increase in wave length and antenna current being met with a compensating increase in aerial capacity.

This brings us to the question of radiation resistance, which by definition should be as high as possible. Radiation resistance is imaginary resistance which would absorb an equal amount of power to that radiated by the same current in the antenna; that is to say, the higher the radiation resistance of the antenna the better the aerial radiates.

Bad Check for $10,000 Is Given to Charity

HONOLULU, March 14.—Charity, in Honolulu, so far as one unknown person is concerned, is twin sister to lavish generosity, but is not at all related to the homely virtues of honesty and sincerity.

Detective Chief Arthur McDuffie is yearning to meet one Jack Pulani Howard and show him, through the medium of a sojourn in jail, that ten real cents are better than ten thousand dream dollars, donated for sweet charity's sake.

When the United Welfare campaign, put over here recently, was at its height, the big-hearted Jack wrote out a check on the Bank of Hawaii for ten thousand dollars. The campaign managers were staggered; they called the bank in order to learn where the Honolulu Greatheart resided, so that they could tender thanks in person. They learned quickly and definitely from the bank officials that Jack was one of those persons who must have his little joke and was using blank bank checks to practice his signature and exercise his sense of humor. Jack isn't on the bank books nor is he in the city directory, but the detective chief promises that should he materialize in the flesh his name will be on the police blotter.

JAIL AGED THIEF WHO STOLE HENS

Sentenced for Chicken Theft After Going Straight Over 80 Years

By International News Service.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., March 14.—After having lived "straight" for more than four score years, Nelson Brady, octogenarian, stood before a bar of justice here recently, charged with a "minor" offense, for which the court ruled he must serve six months in jail.

Brady was a pathetic figure when he appeared before Judge George West, of the local police court. The aged offender, toying nervously with a battered, weather-beaten hat, pleaded guilty to the theft of nine chickens.

The aged man informed the court in hushed tones that hunger had forced him to adopt drastic methods for getting food.

His First Offense.

"Judge," said Brady between sobs, "I have never been in this sort of trouble before. For some time I've been ill. I lost my only living relative, a brother, a short time ago. Some very kind people took me in and cared for me upon learning of my illness. My only food was milk and when their cow went dry—well, I couldn't force myself to ask them for money to purchase milk, so when I saw the chickens I stole them, thinking perhaps I could sell them and buy milk with the money."

After Judge West had pronounced his sentence Brady, with bowed head, was led from the court room. The usualyy phlegmatic court attaches were seemingly as much perturbed over the aged man's sentence as he was. Several were seen to dab at their eyes and rub their noses viciously with handkerchiefs occasionally during Brady's hearing.

Caught Stealing.

Brady was caught in the act of loading chickens into a ramshackle old horse-drawn wagon which was "parked" in an alley at the rear of the home of Q. Q. Claflin, United States commissioner, arresting officers declared.

It was learned that the prisoner had eked out a meager existence up until a short time ago by truck gardening for a wealthy family.

Numerous petitions asking that the court extend clemency to Brady flooded Judge West's mail for several days after Brady was sentenced. A large number of the petitioners offered to provide a home for Brady in the event that the court saw fit to be lenient with him, Judge West stated.

After serving ten days of his half-year sentence Brady was paroled by Judge West, with a warning. New-found friends of the aged man promised to see that he was abundantly provided for for the rest of his days.

MARRIAGE BLISS SURVIVES SUITS

Wife's Actions Against Her Husband Powerless to Separate Couple

By International News Service.

BINGHAMPTON, March 14.—Although his wife had made him defendant in two supreme court actions, Charles K. Ahearn, known to his friends as "Spats" Ahearn, prominent local real estate dealer, to all appearances is still living amicably with her in their home at 130 Murray avenue.

In one action his wife, Julia, charges that he conspired to defraud her out of their home, to which she until recently held the deed.

In the second action his wife accused "Spats" of failing to support her property. Although Ahearn supported the household, his wife declares that $5 per week was her allowance with clothing and suitable entertainment.

Mrs. Julia Ahearn, a leader in her fashionable set, recently told of her difficulties.

"Whenever I asked Charlie for money to buy clothes," she said, "he told me to open a charge account at the downtown stores. But when I'd ask the stores for credit it was 'try and get it.'"

Mrs. Ahearn admitted she and her husband were living on good terms at their home, out of which she accuses him of trying to cheat her.

Fairly Friendly

"Yes, we are living together and are fairly friendly," she said with a laugh, "but I don't intend to let him put anything over on me."

There is one son of their fifteen-year marriage, Charles K. Ahearn, Jr. In her complaint Mrs. Ahearn declares that her husband does not support the boy properly.

Both actions growing out of the matrimonial difficulties of the Ahearns will be tried at the coming session of supreme court here, it is believed.

"Spats" Ahearn acquired his nickname last New Years Eve, according to an amusing anecdote told by his friends.

Near the witching hour, when revelry was at its height at a local hotel, Ahearn entered. Keeping his overcoat and hat on he stopped at the checkroom, it is asserted, removed his spats, and checked them.

Then, solemnly and with dignity, he made the rounds of the tables, greeting his friends. He did not stop. When he had completed the rounds he walked back to the checkroom, recovered his spats, donned them, and slowly walked out.

RUSH CONTRACTS ON NEW HOSPITAL

Work on Sanitarium Is Being Hurried Forward by Strong Crews

The Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital's new health plant is now one-fifth completed.

Recently C. E. Kimlin, manager of this institution, and Dr. H. G. Westphal, its medical superintendent, inspected the progress of the construction work and expressed their complete satisfaction at the speed with which their ideas are being materialized.

Work was commenced about the first of the year. It was estimated that construction would require ten months. Two of these months have now elapsed so the plant is about one-fifth finished.

So far about 200,000 bricks have been used in the walls, according to H. V. Brigham, foreman of the brick masons. Walls of the main building are now up to a height of about ten feet. Steel is now being awaited for the first floor joists.

"Good substantial construction!" was Mr. Kimlin's comment as he pointed to the various strengthening features.

Passage for Pipes

The walls of the kitchen are now being built up. The interior walls will be white glazed brick. It is believed that these will make it possible for the culinary department to be kept absolutely spotless. The dining room will be twice as large as the one in the present sanitarium building.

For the convenince of plumbers a passageway about four feet wide and seven feet deep, and walled with concrete, is being left under the entire length of the main building. This will contain all trunk line pipes which will be easy of access.

Excavation for the medical and hydro-therapy buildings, which will be located in the rear of the east end of the main building, will be finished this week. Contractor E. L. Fleming of 1007 Boynton street now has about thirteen mules on the job. It is reported that they are working with a will because this institution believes in a vegetarian diet.

Roy Gardner's Nemesis Seeks Convict's Liberty

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—Once more the fight to save Roy Gardner, "smiling bandit" and the most notorious train robber since the days of the James brothers, has been taken up by the man who captured him and later became his friend.

Louis S. Sonney, former Centralia, Wash., deputy sheriff and nemesis of Gardner, stopped off in Los Angeles before starting to Washington, D. C. to make a personal appeal to President Harding.

At the time Gardner was found guilty in the federal court at Phoenix, Ariz., of attempting to rob a mail train, physicians stated a bone one-eighth of an inch long was pressing upon the brain and probably was responsible for Gardner's outlaw tendencies.

Woolwine Will Keep On Supervisors' Trail

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—Regardless of any action that may be taken by the board of supervisors on his application for a sixty day leave of absence, with permission to leave the state, District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine, stated again he was going through with his investigation regarding charges that members of the board have violated the law in selling county property to themselves.

All the supervisors are still out of the city and will not return until later in the week. Intimations that Woolwine's request for a leave of absence will be denied when the board meets Monday, have reached the district attorney's office, it was learned.

Lasting Monument to California's History

In the Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse, at the corner of Central avenue and Lexington drive, Glendale has a beautiful and lasting monument to early California history, and a building that will attract wide recognition for its artistic and practical features.

Alfred F. Priest, architect, furnished the guiding inspiration, and to him goes the highest praise for the designing and planning of the new club house. Mr. Priest's ability, devoted service and hearty co-operation received sincere compliments at the housewarming and formal opening of the clubhouse..

Sharing with Mr. Priest in the building success is Elmer Elliott, general contractor, who expertly executed the plans worked out together by Mr. Priest and the club's building committee. Appreciation of Mr. Elliott's services was voiced at the opening Tuesday night.

The building also represents the fine work of: Simons Brick company of Los Angeles, which furnished the brick; W. H. Spink, who did the exterior and interior painting; Glendale Hardwood Flooring company, which installed the hardwood floors throughout the building; Glendale Tile and Mantel company, which installed the mantel in the lounge room, the floor and fountain in the palm room, and all interior tile; the Glendale Mixed Mortar company, which furnished the sand, lime putty and mixed mortar; Wilson-Bell Hardware company supplied the rough hardware; the Glendale Hardware company, which furnished the finish hardware; and the Bentley Lumber company, who furnished all rough lumber, roofing and cement.
